INTRODUCTORY OBSERVATIONS.

In preparing this little work, it was intended to embody in a volume of a size suitable for the pocket, a correct account as possible of the principal roads in the United States, with brief descriptions of other objects that might be most interesting to a traveller, through this extensive, and, in some degree, yet unsettled, country.

The distances from Washington, and from one town, village, or post, to another, were obtained from "A Table of Post Offices, with the Distances from the City of Washington, and capitals of the respective States," published by the direction of the POSTMASTER GENERAL, in 1822.—Some errors which occurred in that table, were discovered and corrected, and from the very nature and extent of the country, more or less errors will be found in similar works, till there shall be a complete survey of all the roads in the Union—a thing which, if ever, will be at a remote period. We must therefore at present be content with such partial surveys and estimates as can be obtained ; the best sources of which are the Post Office Department, and the Notes of Travellers.

There have been at least half a dozen little works published, purporting to be partial or complete lists of roads in the United States, all useful and subservient to the convenience of travellers. Some of the calendars or almanacks, published at Boston, Philadelphia, and Charleston, contained convenient tables of roads and distances most travelled through a few states, or the great chain of roads “from Eastport to Sunbury.”

The first work purporting to be complete, was published and continued annually by Mr. John Mellish, geographer, of Philadelphia, in whose death, not only Pennsylvania, but the United States sustain the loss of a most accurate and industrious geographer, as well as patriot. Mr. Shore, postmaster at Petersburg, Va. published “The Merchant and Travellers’ Companion,” containing an account of the great public and cross roads, with an outline map of the roads to the Virginia Springs, &c. Besides the above, various directories, guides, travelling companions, have been published, all of which have been found useful, as tending to make our extensive country better known by showing the chain of connection, as well as distances, from place to place. It was thought that a very considerable and satisfactory improvement could be made by arranging the distances of the roads from Washington to the extremities of the Union ; the cross roads &c. on one page, and some brief descriptions of the country, the towns, &c. which those roads pass through, on the opposite pages, as is the case in this little work, the convenience and utility of which arrangement are very obvious. This plan is, as far as it respects any AMERICAN work of the kind, ORIGINAL.

A brief outline and sketch of the large cities, that a stranger might have a tolerable idea of them before personally surveying them with the eye, is considered highly requisite. In short, a brief description of the United States, with its principal Roads, the principal Cities, the Currencies, with the addition of some other subjects, were altogether thought to be worthy of Publication.

CONTENTS.

1. A General View of the United States.

2. Descriptions of Boston, New-York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, Richmond, Charleston, Savannah, New-Orleans, with the names and situations of all the principal Streets in those Cities.

3. Statements of all the Great Post-Roads, which lead from Washington, District of Columbia, through different States and Cities, to the extremities of the Union, in various directions, noting the distances from place to place, with descriptions of the country, towns, scenery, &c. through which those roads pass.

4. The most important Cross-roads leading from the large Cities to State capitals, and to the Springs and fashionable places of Summer resort.

5. The principal lines of Steam-Boats and Stages in the Union.

6. A Statement at large of some of the best lines of Packets which sail from large commercial Cities, to other Cities of the United States, and to Great Britain and France.

7. Statements at large of some of the most respectable Hotels and genteel Boarding Houses, in the large Cities, at the Springs, &c.

8. Statements at large of some of the principal Exchange Broker's Offices, Fashionable Clothing Stores, Companies of Artists, &c. &c.

9. The most Fashionable Tours, with Descriptions of the Scenery and Interesting Objects, which are found either in, or near the Tourist's way.

10 Remarks on Travellers, Travelling, Public Houses, &c.

BRIEF DESCRIPTION

OF THE

UNITED STATES.

—000—

THIS great empire extends E. and W. from the Atlantic to the Pacific Ocean. Being in length about 3000 miles ; and in breadth, from N. to S., 1600 miles ; having the following general boundaries, viz :

British and Russian Territories, N. ; Pacific Ocean, W. ; Republic and Gulf of Mexico, S. ; Atlantic Ocean, E. Taking Washington City, the Capital, for the first meridian, the United States extend to 10 deg. E., and 45 W. longitude.

Area of States and Territories, about 2,000,000 square miles. With the exception of Louisiana, Arkansas Territory, Missouri State and Territory, and a very small establishment near the mouth of Columbia River, the whole region west of the Mississippi, is a vast savage wilderness, opening an immense field for adventurers from the Atlantic states, and Europe.

FEATURES.

The features of the United States are boldly marked, by three grand, distinct ranges of mountains, extending from north in a southerly direction. Though there are various spurs, projecting off in different directions, yet they all may be traced to the following three grand ranges.

1. The Alleghany, which rises in about 48 deg. N. latitude, between Maine and Lower Canada, and extends south-westerly. It is from 150 to 200 miles from the Atlantic coast, to which it runs nearly parallel. The ranges and spurs of mountains under the general name Alleghany, have different local names ; as the White Mountains of New-Hampshire, an easterly projection the peak of which is 6,000 feet high ; the Green Mountains, of Vermont ; Catskill, of New-York ; North Peters, Great Alleghany, Sidelong Hill, in Pennsylvania ; Blue Ridge, North, Wells, Savage and Laurel Hills, in Maryland, Virginia, &c ; with a variety of names in different States. The range has southern terminations, in different spurs, in the States of Georgia, Alabama, and Tennessee. The ranges are again noted, when crossed by roads leading from the Atlantic to the Western States.

2. The Oregon Mountains first appear in the neighbourhood of Slave Lake, latitude 60 deg. N., and extend through the United States Territory, into Mexico, where they take the name of Cordillera ; thence a ridge of the same runs south, having a small elevation, which forms the Isthmus of Darien, or Panama ; thence into South America, where one range runs along parallel, and near the Pacific Ocean, to the Straits of Magellan ; and many spurs project east and south-east, forming immense valleys for the formation of the waters of Mammoth rivers, Orinoko, Amazon, Plata, &c.

3. The Californian Mountains, (so called by that accurate geographer, the late Mr. Mellish,) rise near Nootka Sound, about latitude 50, and running due south. parallel, and near the Pacific, terminates at the promontory of California, latitude 23 deg. north.

DECLIVITIES, VALLIES, RIVERS, LAKES.

From the N. E. extremity of the Alleghany range in Lower Canada, to Alabama, there is a slope or declivity from its summit, towards the S. E. and E., determining the course of the large rivers which flow in the same direction, towards the Atlantic. North and west of the same range, there is a north and western declivity, sending the waters north into the St. Lawrence and Lakes, west and south-west into the Mississippi.

From the dividing ridge of the great Oregon, there is an east and south-east declivity, determining the Missouri, and other vast rivers to the east and south-east, to mingle with the Mississippi, the common outlet of waters from the great valley, between the Alleghany and Oregon mountains. Another great valley, formed by the Oregon mountain east, and the Californian mountain west, accumulates the waters which form the Columbia and its branches, which forces a passage through the last named mountain, to the Pacific ocean. This valley also gives the large river Colorado, and its tributary streams, a southern course, into the head of the bay of California. The western declivity of the Californian mountain is too narrow, and too near the ocean, to admit the accumulation of large rivers.

LAKES.

The largest bodies of fresh water, known on the globe, are those which compose a chain of lakes comprising part of the northern boundary line between the United States and British Territories. Commencing with the most easterly, and proceeding west, and north-west, they are as follow :

SOIL, AND CLIMATE, OF THE UNITED STATES.

Strike a line due west from the city of New-York to Easton, Pennsylvania ; thence to Pittsburg, and thence to Columbus, Ohio ; and westward, on the parallel of 40 deg. north, through Indiana, Illinois, and Missouri, and that region of the United States, north of such parallels, has a soil, though favourable to wheat and other grains, is particularly adapted to grazing. Much of the land is stony, and has a tough, durable soil.

The temperature and seasons, north of the above line, are more uniform than in southern latitudes. The earth and rivers are frost-bound in this range, from three to four months in the year.

Between the above parallel, and a line running from Cape Henry, or the southern line of Virginia, and on the dividing line between Virginia, Kentucky, and Missouri, north ; and North-Carolina, Tennessee, and Arkansas, south ; there is a wide range embracing the middle States of the Union, whose soil is generally fertile, and well adapted to three great staples, wheat, Indian corn, and tobacco. The climate of this range is extremely changeable. The earth and rivers alternately frozen and thawed during the winter months.

The region south of the last named southern parallel, has generally, except Tennessee, rather a light, sandy soil, interspersed with extremely rich intervals of alluvian. Its staples of produce are cotton, sugar cane, and rice. Though the climates, &c. of the above three grand parallel ranges partake of each other, as the shades of different colours mingle, and though the soil or climate of a northern latitude of each range may differ from the southern parallel of the same, yet the outline distinction will be found nearly correct. There is a relaxing heat in the last named division, from six to eight months in a year. The climate is much of the year very sickly below the head of tide-waters.

LITERATURE, RELIGION, ARTS, SCIENCES, &c.

EDUCATION.

“Public funds for the education of the whole community, are endowments exclusively American, which have been in operation here for several ages, while the most improved governments in Europe, are but essaying such a ground-work, which, indeed, some of them dread, and others dare not risk.

“It is nearly two hundred years since school funds were established by that aboriginal and immortal hive of intelligence, piety, and self-government—the Plymouth Colony.

“These inestimable appropriations are now incorporated with all our fundamental institutions. By the constitution of the United States, it is the duty of government to promote the progress of science and the useful arts. Not one of the eleven new States has been admitted into the Union, without provision in its constitution for schools, academies, colleges, and universities. In most of the original States, large sums of money are appropriated to education, and they claim a share in the great landed investments, which are mortgaged to it in the new States.

"I believe we may compute the number of pupils, instructed at the public schools throughout the United States, at more than half a million. Nearly the whole of our minor population are receiving school education. Besides the multitudes at school, there are considerably more than three thousand under graduates, always matriculated at the various colleges and universities, authorized to grant academical degrees: not less than twelve hundred at the medical schools—several hundred at the theological seminaries—and at least a thousand students at law."*

There are about ten thousand physicians in the United States, and Medical Colleges for their education in Massachusetts, Rhode-Island, Connecticut, New-York, Pennsylvania, Virginia, and Ohio. There are also two Medical Universities in the State of New-York, one in Pennsylvania, one in Maryland, one in Massachusetts, and one in Kentucky. containing altogether about twelve hundred students.

There are upwards of seven hundred congregational churches in the New-England States, alone, and nearly that number of clergymen of that denomination, including pastors, unsettled ministers, and licensed preachers. There is a Theological Seminary at Andover, in Massachusetts, containing about one hundred and fifty students in Divinity. In Maine, there is a Theological Seminary, with two professors and about forty pupils. Harvard and Yale Colleges have Theological departments attached to them, with professors, and a considerable number of students. In Cornwall, Connecticut, there is also a Heathen Mission School, in which about thirty youth, born in India, on the Pacific ocean, and the western wilds of this continent, or other Heathen places, are educated, with special reference to ministerial duties in their respective birth-places. The Presbyterian Church, in the United States, in addition to the Congregational, contains about nine hundred ministers, one hundred and forty licentiates, one hundred and forty-seven candidates, more than fourteen hundred churches, and a hundred thousand communicants. It has Theological Seminaries in the States of New Jersey, New-York, and Tennessee.

By the Report of the Baptist Convention, which sat in June last, at Washington, the places of worship of that persuasion, are stated at more than two thousand three hundred, and a very large number of ministers. There are three Theological Seminaries of the Baptist Church; one in New England, one in the interior of the State of New York, and one at Washington City.

The Universalists have one hundred and twenty preachers, two hundred separate societies, and eight periodical publications.

The Methodist Church of America, contains three dioceses, eleven hundred itinerant clergy, exclusively clerical, and about three thousand stationary ministers, who attend also to other than ecclesiastical occupations. They reckon twelve conferences, and more than twenty five hundred places of worship.

The Roman Catholic establishment, in the United States, consists of a metropolitan See, and ten bishoprics, containing between eighty and a hundred churches superintended by about one hundred and sixty clergymen. There are Catholic Seminaries at Bardstown and Frankfort, in Kentucky, a Catholic Clerical Seminary in Missouri, Catholic colleges in St. Louis, and New Orleans. where there is likewise a Catholic Lancasterian school; two Catholic charity schools at Baltimore, two in the District of Columbia, a Catholic Seminary and College at Baltimore, a Catholic College in the District of Columbia, a Catholic Seminary at Emmitsburg, in Maryland, a Catholic Free School and Orphan Asylum in Philadelphia. It is calculated that there are not less than eight thousand places of worship, and five thousand ecclesiastics, in the United States, besides twelve Theological Seminaries.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

The District or Territory of Columbia embraces 10 miles square, and is situated near the head of tide water, on the S. W. and N. E. sides of Potomac river, 160 miles from its mouth, taking the course of the river, and about 300 N. W. from the Capes of Virginia. This tract of land was ceded to the United States by the Legislatures of Maryland and Virginia, in 1791. The District comprises Washington City, Georgetown, and Alexandria, and contained, in 1820, 32,039 inhabitants.

There is a continued mountainous ridge environing the District of Columbia, with the exception of passages of Potomac and Eastern Branch, commencing at Mount Vernon. This ridge may be traced (by the naked eye from Capitol Hill,) to the Little Falls at Georgetown, thence along N. of Washington to Prospect Hill towards Bladensburg, thence along the hills S. E. of Eastern Branch to Digges' Point, or Fort Washington, opposite Mount Vernon. This topographical situation of the District renders it most easy to fortify and defend.

WASHINGTON CITY,

Which became the National Capital in 1800, is situated on the N. E. side of Potomac, 3 miles below the head of tide water, between Eastern Branch, its Eastern boundary, and Rock Creek, its Western, in lat. 38 dg. 53m. N. and is the FIRST MERIDIAN for the United States. The Western and Eastern boundaries extend about 2 1-2 miles N. up both Rock Creek and Eastern Branch, and from North West to South East about four miles and a half. The streets run from North to South, crossing each other at right angles, excepting fifteen grand Avenues that range in the direction of different States in the Union, each of which bears the name of a State. The width of the streets generally is from ninety to a hundred and ten feet, that of the Avenues from a hundred and thirty to a hundred and sixty feet. From the Capitol diverges the Maryland, Delaware, and Pennsylvania Avenues; from the President's house, Vermont, New-York, and Connecticut Avenues, altogether forming eleven hundred and fifty squares. The Pennsylvania Avenue leading to Georgetown, runs in a direct line from the President's house to the Capitol, the distance of one mile. The site of the Capitol is about 80 feet above the tide water of the Potomac, and nearly 70 above the surface of the city generally, commanding an extensive and beautifully variegated prospect. The foundation stone of the north wing of the Capitol was laid in the presence of General Washington, on the 16th of September, 1793. The center building was commenced in 1818, which, with the two wings each 100 feet square, forms a front of 362 feet.

It is built of white free stone, in the Corinthian style of architecture, and enclosed with 20 acres of ground by an elegant iron railing. The interior of the Capitol, for beauty and convenience, is said not to be excelled by any other house of legislation on the globe. It contains a number of historical and other paintings, several of which were executed by American artists.

The President's house is a beautiful edifice of the Ionic order, built of white free stone, 170 feet by 85, 2 stories high, and covered with copper. Four buildings of brick, of equal dimensions, are erected in a line east and west of the President's house, for the principal heads of the Departments of Government, viz. State, Treasury, Navy, and War Departments.

About a mile W.N.W. of the Capitol, is the General Post Office, a large respectable brick building, containing also the Patent Office, where are exhibited numerous specimens and models of improvements and inventions, said to be equal in number and superior to similar collections in England or France.

The City Hall, commenced in 1820, is 251 feet in length, fifty in breadth—the whole building of equal height the wings having two stories, the center one, and covered with slate.

The Navy Yard is situated about a mile from the Capitol, on the Anicosta, or Eastern Branch. It enclosed by a high brick wall, and besides the commandant's house and gardens, contains large stone ware houses and workshops. In the middle of the Yard is placed a Monument of Italian marble, of Italian workmanship, erected in memory of our brave countrymen who fell before Tripoli. At this Yard some of our largest ships of war have been built, and more are still building. There is a bridge across the Potomac one mile and one rod in length, leading to Alexandria; and two excellent bridges are built across the Eastern Branch. Higher up its banks is a large square reserved for a Naval Hospital, and further on is the National Burying Ground, so called, as being the place of interment for the members of Congress and other public characters who die at the seat of Government. The Monuments erected in memory of members of Congress, about fourteen in number, are all built in the same manner, in a square form of white marble. There is also a handsome Monument over the grave of Geo. Clinton, Governor of New-York, and Vice President of the United States, and one erected to the memory of Elbridge Gerry, Vice President of the United States, built at the expense of Government, is the most beautiful Monument of the kind in America.

Washington city contains 2,300 houses, and 15,000 inhabitants. There are fourteen brick churches, fourteen schools, and four markets. Four public Journals and Newspapers are published in the city. Among the literary institutions, are a Medical Society, a Botanical Society, and the Columbian Institute. Columbia College is situated on an elevation three miles north of the Capitol. It is a brick building, 117 by 47. The Baptist Theological Seminary is connected with the College. The soil in and around Washington is generally sandy, excepting the level banks of the Potomac, and some other spots, where there is a rich alluvion. The climate of Washington is extremely variable all seasons of the year, more particularly in spring and autumn. A south easterly wind in the morning sets in from the Chesapeake Bay, when,

P if the streets of the city are dry, clouds of dust are blown through them ; such a wind usually brings rain, when the streets, except some of the side walks, are deep with mud ; this state of things is soon changed, when a clear azure space opens in the north west, from which blows a piercing elastic wind, driving the dark clouds before it, drying the streets, and in its turn enveloping the city in clouds of dust from Georgetown to the Capitol.

Notwithstanding this constant variation of temperature, Washington, so far, has been considered, and probably is, a healthy city. The water is better than in any of the large cities from Boston to New Orleans inclusive.

Omitting any remarks on the propriety and justice of the following lines, they are given as a poetical description of this Capital by Anacreon Moore.

"In fancy now beneath the twilight gloom,
Come, let me lead thee o'er this modern Rome,
Where tribunes rule, where dusky Davi bow,
And what was Goose-Creek once, is Tyber now,
This famed metropolis, where fancy sees
Squares in morasses, obelisks in trees ;
Which travelling fools, and Gazetteers adorn
With shrines unbuilt and heroes yet unborn ;
Tho' nought but wood and ——— they see,
Where streets should run as sages ought to be."

BALTIMORE

Became an incorporated city in 1797, since which period, its growth has been so rapid as to be now the third city in size in the Union, containing, in 1820, 62,738 inhabitants.

It is situated round a body of water called the Basin, on the north side of the Patapsco river, 14 miles north-west of North Point, where it enters the Chesapeake bay. Baltimore, as originally laid out, is 4 miles square ; a number of its streets extend through the city, the principal of which is Baltimore, or Market street, 80 feet wide, running in a straight line from east to west, the distance of one mile. It is the only regular street of its length in this direction. commencing east, Market street is crossed at right angles by Belvedere, Calvert, Charles, Howard, and Eutaw streets, which extend nearly or quite through the city from north to south, and several other intervening streets; Frederick, Gay, Light, Hanover, Sharp, and Liberty streets, which mostly terminate at Market street. North of Market street, and parallel with it, are Chatham street, New Church street, Pleasant and Franklin streets. These are the principal streets, though there are a variety of others running irregularly in various directions. The city has three local divisions; Baltimore New Town, Baltimore Old Town, and Fell's Point. The first is separated from the two last by Jones' Falls, a small river. Vessels of 600 tons burden come up to the wharves of Fell's Point, while those only of about 200 tons can come to the city.

Baltimore contains a number of spacious and elegant public buildings; among which are the Exchange, 366 feet by 140, with four wings, one of which is occupied for the United States Bank, another for a Custom-house, and a third as a Coffee-house. The Catholic Cathedral, the Unitarian Church, St. Paul's Church, and Union Bank. The Washington Monument is built of stone, 366 feet high, and 50 feet square; at its base, situated in the northern part of the city, it has a dark passage on the inside to the top, from whence may be seen, in clear weather, a most extensive and beautiful prospect. The Battle Monument, commemorative of the action which took place at North Point, September 13th. 1814, is placed in a conspicuous part of the city; it is 35 feet in height, and on it are inscribed the names of those who fell in that battle. Its other principal public buildings are a theatre, museum, court-house, penitentiary, hospital, 5 market-houses, and including those before mentioned, 10 banks, and 38 houses of worship. The literary institutions are, Baltimore College, St. Mary's College, a Medical College, and several academies and private schools. There are two circulating libraries, each containing several thousand volumes.

Baltimore is built on an uneven surface, and supplied with good water from four public fountains, circumstances favourable to health, but from some local and other causes, it has had several severe visitations of the yellow fever, the prevalence of which, for a number of summers, together with the stagnation of commerce, has had a deteriorating effect on the business of the city.

PHILADELPHIA.

In the month of August, 1692, William Penn, with upwards of one hundred other persons, embarked from England for Delaware river, in the ship Welcome, Robert Greenway, Master. They arrived in the Delaware, discharged their freight at a sandy beach, near which the ship was laid up for the winter, in a small creek, now occupied by Dock street, Philadelphia. These Quaker pilgrims secured themselves from the inclemency of winter in bark huts, which they learned to build from the savages, and in caves, which they dug under an elevated bank of the river. In one of these caves the first Anglo Pennsylvanian was born. His name was William Key; he lived till the year 1767, aged 85, and saw a forest change to the city of Philadelphia, with 4000 houses, and 30,000 inhabitants.

Philadelphia, the metropolis of Pennsylvania, the third city in the Union in regard to commerce, the second in population, and the first in architectural taste, manufactures, and the fine arts, is situated on the west bank of the Delaware river, 30 miles below the head of tide water at Trenton Falls, 50 miles above where the river enters Delaware Bay, and about 130 miles from the Atlantic, taking the course of the river and bay, and 60 in a direct line. With the exception of a small ascent from the Delaware, Philadelphia is on a level plain. In proceeding from this river, and taking the streets which run parallel to it, they are—1st, Dock street, Water street, Front street: Then is a succession of streets parallel to these, viz. 2d, 3d, 4th, and 5th, and so on to 13th street. Then is a great parallel avenue, called Broad street, 113 feet wide. Between Broad street and Schuylkill river are eight streets more, counted from the latter river towards Broad street. Between the two extremes of all the above mentioned streets, and at right angles with them, is another grand avenue, E. and W. from Delaware to the Schuylkill, called High, or more commonly Market street, in the centre of which the principal market of the city extends about three-fourths of a mile. The streets running E and W. are generally named from the native trees that are supposed to have grown, or were actually growing, when the city was laid out. On the N. of High street, and parallel to it, are Arch, Race, Vine, and Callowhill streets. On the S. Chesnut, Walnut, Spruce, Pine, Cedar, and South streets. Most, if not all of the above, run from the Delaware to the Schuylkill.—Dean Prideaux observes that Penn had in view the celebrated city of Babylon as a model for his American town. See Prideaux's connection of the Old and New Testament, vol 1st. So far as regularity is considered, this observation may be correct; but the most splendid ornaments of the Chaldean Capital, the brazen gates, the palaces, the hanging gardens, the temple of Belus, were omitted in filling up the draft.

NEW-YORK CITY,

The commercial metropolis of America, is situated on the south west part of York Island, at the junction of the Hudson and East rivers, in latitude 40 degrees and 42 minutes N. The limits of the city extend over the whole Island, and the buildings extend two and a half miles up the Hudson, and nearly four up the East river. New-York contains 133,000 inhabitants, "more than one third of whom are of New England origin," 252 streets, alleys, and lanes, and 17 000 dwelling houses. In the most commercial district of New-York city, which is the south part of the city, on the Sound, or as called East river, the streets are so irregular, that no verbal description can be satisfactorily understood. Run a line from the Haboken team boat ferry, at the end of Murray street, on North river, through the Park south easterly to Brooklyn team boat ferry, on East river, and that part of the city included in the space south or south west of such line, is where the greater part of the commercial business is done.—Along the docks of both rivers in this district, forests of masts and spars extend the whole distance. Countless streets, lanes, and alleys, meet, and cross each other, from all directions, teeming with the quick energies of commerce, and crowded with people of all states and nations. Drays loaded with bales, packages and hogsheads, carts and wagons, from Swede and Russian ships, loaded with heavy bars of iron, rattling and jarring over the coarse paving stones, make a part of the bustling scene of this district. A walk on the Battery, or up Broadway, changes the scene from the turmoil of commerce, to the promenades of taste and fashion.

Broadway, 80 feet wide and 3 miles long, runs in a straight line from the Battery through nearly the centre of the city to its extremity, and terminates in Bloomingdale road.

The principal public buildings in Broadway, commencing at its southern extremity, are,

Wall street commences at Broadway, and passing through Pearl street, extends to E. river. Near Pearl st. is an auction mart for public sales, between which and Broadway are a number of Banking Houses, Insurance Offices, and various other public offices.

The Banks in Wall street are,

| 1. Mechanics' Bank,..... | 5. Bank of America. |
| 2. Phoenix Bank,..... | 6. Merchants' Bank. |
| 3. City Bank,..... | 7. Manhattan do. |
| 4. New-York do..... | 8. Union do. |

There are also an Exchange Bank, Custom House, corner of Nassau street, Merchants' Hotel, and Tontine Coffee House.

Pearl street commences at the Battery, and after a meandering circular course of about a mile, enters Broadway above Duane street. It is only second to Broadway in point of business and display of merchandize. Washington and Greenwich streets run parallel to the North river two miles; the latter is a place of considerable business. The Post Office is at the corner of Garden and William street, S. of Wall street. Many other streets might be enumerated equal in many respects to those already mentioned. Those here described are the principal streets in the city, for length, elegance, and business.

The Park is situated in the centre of the city, at the junction of Broadway and Chatham street, planted with trees, and interspersed with walks. It has an area of about four acres. At the upper end of the Park stands the City Hall, a noble structure 216 feet in length, 105 in breadth, and 51 feet high, including the attic story 65 feet. The building is surmounted with a cupola, on which is placed a colossal figure of Justice. The City Hall is the most beautiful building in the United States, excepting the national Capitol. It was nine years building, and cost half a million of dollars. The Battery consists of several acres of ground at the S. W. point of the city. It has been justly called "the ornament of New-York." New-York contains a Medical college, Columbia college, a Theological seminary, and a variety of literary institutions, embracing every department of science. There are ten market houses, eleven banks, twenty-one insurance offices, two theatres, a circus Richmond hill, Vauxhall, and Chatham public gardens, an orphan asylum society, seventy-one churches, and a great number of benevolent institutions.

BOSTON.

This ancient, wealthy, and respectable city, the Capital of Massachusetts, and the literary emporium of America, was originally settled by some of the most pious and learned of the first emigrants from England. Its situation is on a peninsula; an isthmus, or very narrow neck of land unites it with the continent. It has also five bridges connecting it with the main. Charles river bridge, leading to Charlestown on the north, built in 1786, is 1,503 feet long. Two bridges connect it with Cambridge, one of which, West Boston bridge, is 3,433 feet long, built on 180 piers. Another uniting different parts of the town, and the Mill Dam bridge, finished in 1821, built across the bay at a cost of $600,000, formed of stone and earth, nearly two miles in length, 13 feet high, and fifty feet broad, built for the purposes of forming an avenue to Brookline, and to create a water power sufficient to put in operation extensive manufactories and other water works. The city contains 155 streets and 27 lanes. The longest street commences at the termination of the isthmus, is first called Washington street the distance of half a mile, then changes its name to Orange, then passing Boylston market, takes several other names, Marlborough, Cornhill, &c. until it terminates at the Centre, or Old Market.

The State House, the most conspicuous edifice in the city, is built of brick, presenting a front of 173 feet, and surmounted with a dome 50 feet in diameter, which is terminated by a circular lantern at a distance of 100 feet from the foundation. Its site is 100 feet above the level of the harbour. From its top may be seen the most extensive and beautiful prospect in the world, embracing more than twenty towns and villages, the harbour, its shipping, and from thirty to forty islands, with a highly cultivated and picturesque country, variegated with rivers, valleys, and romantic hills, crowned with tasteful and splendid country seats. In the south west, at a distance of twelve miles, is seen an extensive range of highlands, called Blue Hills, which form a back ground to the prospect in that direction.

RICHMOND.

This Capital and metropolis of Virginia, has a fine romantic and salubrious situation on the James river, at the head of tide water, in Henrico county, in lat. $37^{\circ} 30m$. north, 123 miles from Washington, 55 miles above City Point, by the course of the river, 150 miles from its mouth.

The city contains between one and two thousand houses, some of them elegant, particularly on Shockoe, or as it is now called Capitol Hill, in the vicinity of the State House, and upwards of 12,000 inhabitants.

The principal streets are Main street, running from the Capitol to Rocket's, the distance of two miles, compactly built, and containing a great variety of dry goods and other stores—the principal hotels are situated in this street.

Cary street, running parallel with the Pasin is occupied almost exclusively by commission merchants.

Here is delivered all the produce from the upper country bordering on James river. The whole of the tobacco and flour business are done in this street.

H and G streets on Capitol Hill, run parallel with the Basin, and nearly intersect at the junction of the two turnpikes, on the western suburbs of the town.

The public buildings of note are the Capitol, or House of State Legislation, a very handsome structure, built after a French model, and beautifully situated on Shockoe Hill, from whence may be had an extensive view of the lower parts of the city, the river, and adjacent country. The Monumental church, an interesting object, stands east of the State House, built in a monumental form, commemorative of an awful conflagration which took place at the Theatre on the same spot, in 1811. There are also two market houses, an extensive armoury, United States Bank, court house, museum, public library, and eight houses of worship.

Notwithstanding the advantageous situation of Richmond for the purposes of commerce, and an extensive inland trade, the population in 1820 was more than 2000 less than in 1817. The value of produce exported from Richmond and Manchester (just opposite,) is about $8,000,000 annually. The largest vessels lie at City Point. Those drawing fifteen feet water ascend to Warwick, five miles below Richmond, and those drawing ten feet to Rocket's, about a mile below the city. Batteaux ascend 220 miles above. The Falls extend six miles, in which distance the river descends eighty feet. A Canal with three locks is cut on the north side of the river, terminating at the town in a Basin of two acres. The vicinity of Richmond affords many delightful excursions on the James river, and along its high and fertile banks. There is an excellent road leading from Richmond to Petersburg, on which are two good lines of stages. Steamboats are constantly plying to and from Richmond to Norfolk, and stopping at City Point and various other places, to receive and discharge passengers. The scenery of James river, almost from the bay up, is delightful, adding to its natural beauties, numerous rich plantations, with elegant mansions, gardens, &c. James-city Island, where was made the first permanent settlement in the present United States, is situated near the north bank of James river, 32 miles from the bay, and 65 below Richmond. It is a flat, low, and sickly spot, containing the ruins of an old church, a fort, and a few dwelling houses. There is a mansion house, and in 1822, was one family living on the Island. At this spot, in the month of June, is held the Virginiad, a celebration of the day when capt. Smith and company first landed here. This Island, Plymouth, Massachusetts, Lexington, Bunker Hill, and Yorktown, awaken in the breasts of the patriotic citizens of these two states the noblest feelings of man. A few revolving years past between the arrival of these few forlorn adventurers in "a wilderness at the ends of the earth," and the opening and close of the great revolutionary drama, when this wilderness produced native born armies too powerful for the despots of Europe. But a brief description of the Virginia Capital was the subject proposed.

CHARLESTON.

The chief city of South-Carolina is handsomely situated on a level plain, between Cooper river north, and Ashley river south, which unite just below the city, seven miles from the ocean. Charleston is laid out in a regular manner, and contains a number of well built streets, from thirty-five to seventy feet wide.—The principal of these are, Broad and E. bay streets, which for the elegance of their buildings are not surpassed by those of any other city. East bay street, running from north to south, contains large ware houses, auction marts, banks, and various public offices. This street terminates in the south eastern part of the city, in a delightful promenade, formed by a mound elevated on the margin of Ashley river, several feet above the tide. This walk is securely railed on the water-side, accommodated with seats, and ornamented with trees. Here, in the heat of summer, the same as at Boston and on the New-England seaboard, at 10 or 11 o'clock, there is a reviving sea-breeze.

Broadstreet, a spacious, and, with Meeting and Church streets, the most fashionable in the city, run in a direct line, from east to west, two miles. King street passes through the centre of the city, from north to south, intersecting Broad street at right angles. This street is compactly built, and has a large portion of the retailing business. Charleston contains nineteen houses of worship, an orphan asylum, an academy of arts, a library of 13,000 volumes, a hospital, city hall, custom house, theatre, and six banks. There are also a number of well endowed charitable institutions. The population of the city, according to the last census, was 24,780, half slaves, having only an increase of less than 100 in ten years.

Charleston has an extensive European, as well as northern and back country trade. The shipping owned here, in 1820, amounted to 28,403 tons. The harbour is capacious, but is impeded by a sand bar, which extends from shore to shore. It has two channels, the deepest of which has 16 feet of water at low tide.—The local situation of Charleston has been greatly improved within a few years, which renders it much more healthy than the surrounding country. Many persons resort to the city in that season, when those in a more northern latitude are, in a manner, deserted. Sullivan's Island, situated in the bay, between the city and the sea, is a favourite retreat for many of the citizens in warm weather. This southern metropolis of the Union, is noted for the hospitality, politeness, and liberality of its citizens. It is a fashionable, gay, and flourishing city, constantly improving in whatever tends to promote the health and prosperity of the inhabitants.

SAVANNAH,

Principal city of Georgia, has an elevated situation on the south-west bank of Savannah river, seventeen miles above its entrance into the sea, on a high sandy bluff, 40 feet above low tide. It is beautifully laid out, with wide regular streets leaving at equal distances ten public squares, each consisting of two acres, with a pump in the centre, enclosed with chain fences, and ornamented with trees called the pride of China.

This city has improved much in appearance since the great fire of 1821, which consumed 463 buildings. Those since erected are of brick, built in a handsome style. The exchange is a large Gothic edifice of brick, five stories high. The Academy built of brick and stone is 180 feet by 60, and three stories high. There are also a court house and hospital, a theatre, a public library, three banks, and ten churches, one of which, lately erected, is a capacious and elegant structure. Savannah is the great depot for the produce of a large extent of country, consisting of the three principal southern staples, cotton, rice, and tobacco, the exports of which amount to about $10,000,000 annually. The amount of shipping belonging to this port in 1821, was nearly 11,000 tons. The harbour is good, admitting vessels drawing fourteen feet of water, to the city; those of a larger draught anchor at Five Fathom Hole, three miles below the city.—Savannah is frequently visited by that dreadful scourge the yellow fever. Before its last ravages, in 1822, there was but one cemetery or burial ground in the city: this is very extensive, and contains the remains of vast numbers from the northern states, and from every country in Europe. The climate of the south is peculiarly fatal to foreigners, though it is observed the Scotch sustain its effects better than even Americans.

The mail is transported in stages, each day in the year, 10,121 miles.

The mail is transported in sulkies and on horseback, each day in the year, 10,616 miles, making 20,737 miles per day.

If you divide the post roads of the United States into two distinct post-routes, the mail will travel each week, in stages, nearly equal to three times round the globe; and divide all the post roads in the United States into four equal or distinct post routes, on which the mail is carried in stages, sulkies, and on horseback, it will be equal to a travel of six times, each week, around the globe, averaging one post-office for every fifteen miles of post-road.

The mail is transported, by a direct or corresponding line of stages, from Anson, in the state of Maine, via. Washington city, to Nashville, Tennessee, a distance of one thousand four hundred and forty-eight miles, in a south-western direction. The mail is transported by a direct line of stages, from St. Mary's, in Georgia, to Highgate, in Vermont, via. Washington.

(a) Bladensburg, an old village, containing about one hundred houses, most of them small, in a low situation on the Eastern Branch. In 1814, a battle was fought here between the Americans, most of them raw militia, and the British regulars, in which the former were defeated, Washington was taken, and the public buildings burnt, together with the National Library.

(b) The Patuxent river rises between 30 and 40 miles from the road, and though an inconsiderable stream here, is at Benedict, 50 miles below, and twenty miles from its mouth, of sufficient water for the largest ships.

(c) A small scattering, though very pleasant village, on the West bank of the Susquehanna river, near its mouth, and 450 from where it rises in the State of New-York, taking the course of the river. It is here one mile wide, and crossed by a horseboat.

(d) The Capital of Cecil county, Md. It stands on Elk river, which a little below falls into the Chesapeake. A Canal is about being cut from these waters to the Christiana, a branch of the Delaware river, which, when completed, will form an inland water communication the whole distance from Baltimore to Philadelphia.

(e) Christiana, or Christiana Bridge, Newcastle county, Delaware, on a river of the same name. It has about 60 houses, and considerable trade with Philadelphia in flour.

The Christiana rises in Pa. and uniting with the Brandywine near Wilmington, flows into the Delaware. It is navigable for vessels drawing 14 feet of water to Wilmington, and for those drawing 6 feet to Christiana bridge. Length 20 miles.

(f) A beautiful town on an elevated site, near the junction of the Christiana and Brandywine rivers. It is a few miles West, and in full view of the Delaware river, and its interesting scenery. The largest town in Delaware, having 8 houses of worship, 2 market houses, and other public buildings. On the Brandywine, adjoining the town, is a village of 100 houses, partly included within the Borough, and the largest collection of flour mills in the United States. Within 10 miles of Wilmington, are said to be 44 flour mills, 13 cotton manufactories, 15 sawmills, 6 woollen manufactories, 6 gunpowder mills, 2 paper mills, and several other mills, &c. Population of Wilmington, 5,268.

(g) A handsome village on the Banks of the Delaware, directly opposite Burlington, N. J. It is a healthy and pleasant situation, and is much resorted to by strangers during the summer season.

(h) The Capital of New-Jersey, which you enter by crossing an elevated bridge over the Delaware, near Trenton Falls. Trenton contains about 4000 inhabitants, a state house, 2 banks, and 4 houses of worship, besides several manufactories. The river is navigable for sloops to this place, but above the falls it will only admit of boats carrying from 500 to 1000 bushels. The town is pleasantly situated, and incorporated with city privileges.

(i) A small town, containing Nassau Hall, or Princeton College, and a Theological Seminary—the situation agreeable and healthy, being on the highlands which divide the streams which run W. into Delaware from those which run E. into the Raritan river.

(j) Brunswick stands on a sloping bank, west side of the Raritan river, 16 miles above Raritan Bay. It contains a court house, a market house, 2 banks, 5 houses of public worship, and 4000 inhab. The Raritan is navigable for small sloops as far as this place.

(k) Newark is a beautiful town, handsomely situated on the west side of the Passaic river. It is built principally on one great street or avenue, extending from N. to S. nearly two miles, and ornamented with trees. Many of the houses are built in a superior style. The public buildings are 5 churches, an academy, and 2 banks. Here are extensive manufactories of various articles. The town contains about 5000 inhabitants, and including the township, the population exceeds 9000.

(l) This village is pleasantly situated in the extensive plain between the East River Haarlem Heights, and Haarlem River. It contains upwards of a 100 dwelling houses, a handsome stone church, and several school houses. A bridge, half a mile in length across Haarlem river, connects New-York Island with Westchester. Another bridge of considerable length over a part of the East river, connects it with Wards' Island, from the south side of which is a fair view of the whirlpools that form the dangerous passage called Hell-gate.

(m) The first town after entering New England, situated on the E. side of Byram river, which is here the dividing line between New-York and Connecticut. Population 3700.

(n) A township of 4500 inhabitants, on the West side of the Housatonic river, near its entrance into the Sound, and 130 miles from where it rises in Massachusetts. Near the line of the latter State, this river has a perpendicular fall of 50 feet.

(o) New-Haven is an incorporated city, and semi-capital of Connecticut, containing 7147 inhabitants. It is situated on a Bay, 4 miles from the Sound, handsomely laid out in spacious streets, and ornamented with trees. Here are the elegant buildings of Yale College, which have from 3 to 400 students. Between 3 and 4000 persons have been educated at this College since its foundation in 1700, of whom nearly 1000 have devoted themselves to the ministry. 4 newspapers are issued weekly.

(p) On the West bank of Connecticut river, where it enters the Sound, after a course of 400 miles. This is the first town settled in Connecticut. It has 8 churches, several manufactories, and 4000 inhabitants.

(q) City and Capital of New London county, on the West bank of Thames river, near its mouth. This has been a place of considerable commerce, having an excellent harbour, the best in the State. It is a handsome, respectable, but small city, containing from 3 to 4000 inhabitants.

(r) Capital of Norfolk county, Mass. consisting of 3 parishes.

The principal part of the town is handsomely situated on Charles river. It is a valuable manufacturing and agricultural town, and contains a court house, a bank, 2 printing offices, and several elegant private dwellings. Population between 2 and 3000.

(s) Providence, the semi-capital of Rhode Island, and third commercial town in New England, is situated on Providence river, over which a handsome bridge is built, connecting the E. and W. parts of the town. This town may be called irregularly beautiful, combining a greater variety of views and scenery than any other town in New England except Boston. And from the salubrity of its atmosphere, excellence of its houses of entertainment, and above all from the politeness, sociability, and literary accomplishments of its citizens, it is much resorted to during the warm season, and highly admired by strangers.— Its population is upwards of 12,000. On a commanding eminence, a little E. of the town, is Brown University. This, according to Dr. Morse, is one of the most flourishing and respectable literary Institutions in the United States.

(t) The capital of Essex county, Mass. lying between two inlets called North and South rivers. The oldest town in the State except Plymouth, and containing 11,346 inhabitants.— The commerce of Salem is very extensive, and in point of population and wealth is the second town in New England.

(u) Situated on the S. W. bank of Merrimac river, three miles from its mouth. This is one of the handsomest towns in the United States. Its site is on an eminence gradually sloping towards the water. It has been a place of considerable trade, but is now rather on the decline. Population 7000. The Merrimac river rises near the White Mountains, and, after a meandering course of nearly 200 miles, enters the sea three miles below the town above-mentioned.

(v) The largest town in New Hampshire, situated on the S. W. side of Piscataqua river, three miles from its mouth, and 40 from where it rises. Portsmouth contains 7000 inhabitants, an academy, athenæum, 2 markets, 5 banks, and 7 churches.— Opposite the town is an United States' Navy Yard.

(w) Kennebunk is situated on the N. E. side of Saco river, and contains 2500 inhabitants. This river rises near the White Mountains, and after a course of 160 miles, S. E. in which there are four cataracts, it enters the sea just below this town. Here is a good harbour and considerable trade.

[x] This is a romantic situation on the Saco river, which has Falls here of 42 feet, which, with the surrounding scenery forms a delightful view. Here, is a bank and an academy, and 3000 inhabitants.

[y] Situated in latitude 43 degrees 39 minutes. The capital of the State of Maine, in Cumberland county, on a Peninsula, at the head of Casco bay. It is a pleasant but rather irregularly built town, containing 8581 inhabitants. An elegant court house, now used as a state house; also 2 banks, an insurance office, and 8 houses for public worship. Portland has an excellent harbour, and exports large quantities of domestic produce. The shipping belonging to this port amounts to upwards of 27,000 tons. On an eminence in the vicinity of the town, is an Observatory, nearly 70 feet high, affording a beautiful prospect of the town and surrounding scenery.

[s] On S. side of the Androscoggin, containing a number of mills and manufactories, and nearly 3000 inhabitants. Bowdoin College is located in this town. It has an elevated situation, and commands a fine view of the river and surrounding country.

[*] A port of entry in Lincoln county, Me. on the W. side of Kennebec river. It is advantageously situated for commerce, and is one of the most commercial towns in the State. Population 3,026.

[a] Is pleasantly situated on W. side of Sheepscot, and contains upwards of 2000 inhabitants, a court house, jail, bank, insurance office, and an academy.

[b] A town containing between 2 and 3000 inhabitants, on the River St. George, and W. side of Penobscot Bay.—The river is navigable to this town for vessels of 200 tons. Here are found large quantities of limestone.

[c] Beautifully situated on Belfast Bay—very advantageously situated for trade. The town is flourishing, and has an Academy, and between 1 and 2 thousand inhabitants.

[d] A finely situated town, on the E. side of Penobscot Bay, Capital of Hancock county, Maine. It has a convenient harbour, and a flourishing trade, and contains a court house, jail, bank, and about 1000 inhabitants.

[e] Consisting of two villages on the E. and W. branches of Machias river, six and a half miles apart. The annual exports from this port, in fish and lumber, amount to 100,000 dollars.

[f] Situated in Passamaquoddy Bay, and includes Moose, Frederick, and Dudley Islands. It is well situated for commerce, and has good wharves, built sufficiently high to secure them from the extraordinary high tides in the Bay of Fundy.

[g] Robbinstown is on the N. W. side of the Passamaquoddy bay, and the most remote town in the Union in this direction. The common tides in this bay rise 25 feet. Population upwards of 400.

The State of Maine contains as many square miles as the late Kingdom of Holland. And from its healthy climate, large rivers flowing from the interior, extensive seacoast, convenience to the great fisheries, and advantages of proximity to Europe, and above all, from the temperance, education, and pushing bold enterprise of its athletic citizens, it may one day more than equal the Batavian Kingdom in commerce and wealth.

[h] This village is also called Rockville. There is an extremely bad turnpike from Washington to this place, so much so, that the man who keeps the toll house, after having taken toll, recommends travellers to go the old road.

[i] Monocasy creek, or river, rises in Pennsylvania, and falls into the Potomac nearly south of this. There is a good bridge over this creek, which you cross from Baltimore to Frederick.

[j] Capital Frederick county, Md. on Carroll's creek, a branch of the Monocasy. It is pleasantly situated, regularly laid out, and well built, and contains a court-house, a jail, a bank, a market house, an academy, and 7 houses of public worship, 1 for German Lutherans, 1 for German Calvinists, 1 for Episcopalians, 1 for Presbyterians, 1 for Roman Catholics, 1 for Baptists, and 1 for Methodists. A considerable portion of the houses are built of brick, many are framed, and some are constructed of logs. The streets intersect each other at right angles, and some of them are paved. The town is situated in a fine plain, and the soil in the vicinity is extremely fertile. Four newspapers are published here. Population 3,637.

[k] A handsomely situated town, but inhabited almost entirely by Germans. The soil in its vicinity is extremely fertile, and highly cultivated. There are two houses of worship, both German, and a newspaper is published in that language.

[l] The capital of York county, Pennsylvania, containing 3,000 inhabitants. The road from Washington to this place, and twelve miles beyond, towards Harrisburg, is through a rich and tolerably level country; after which, for two hundred miles, it is through a rough, hilly, and mountainous country.—The land, however, generally speaking, is fertile.

[m] Capital of Pennsylvania. on the east bank of the Susquehannah, and containing 3,000 inhabitants. It has a beautiful, yet low and unhealthy situation, being subject to summer and autumnal fevers. The capitol, or house of legislation is an elegant edifice, standing a little back of the town, on a small elevation. A handsome bridge, one mile long, is here built over the Susquehannah. The road to Niagara runs northerly from this, through a rough and picturesque country.

[n] A small town at the junction of the east and west branches of the Susquehannah.

[o] In Niagara river, 35 miles in length, running from Lake Erie to Lake Ontario, are the Falls of Niagara, one of the most beautiful and sublime spectacles on the globe. The tremendous concussion and deafening sound of the cataract can never be realized from description. To a spectator near the bottom of the fall, it seems as though an ocean from an upper world had broken from its mounds, and was tumbling to the world below.

[p] The capital of the state of New-York, on west side of Hudson river. It is the second city in the state, containing upwards of 12,000 inhabitants. The public buildings are, a large handsome state-house, a court-house, city hall, academy, public library, museum, two markets, four banks, and twelve houses of worship. Albany has a gradual ascent from the river to an eminence the site of the capitol, from which the city, the Hudson river, and surrounding villages, affording an elegant landscape.

[q] A pleasant small city, on the east side of the Hudson, at the head of sloop navigation. It is the third town in size in the state. "Mount Ida," a little east of Troy, affords one of the finest and most extensive views on the river, embracing four or five towns, including Albany, six miles distant, the Hudson, the Mohawk, with its three mouths, and a beautifully variegated and undulating country. Population, 5,264.

[r] In Washington county, New-York, near the great bend of the Hudson river, 16 miles from Lake George. The New-York Northern Canal, from Lake Champlain opens into the Hudson at this place through a lock. In the American wars, this was an important military station, commanding the country between the Hudson, Lake Champlain, and Lake George. The old fort is now demolished.

[s] Washington county, New-York, on a high sandy plain, on the east bank of the Hudson, near the point where the Champlain canal meets the Hudson. It is a handsome compact village, with considerable trade.

[t] On Lake Champlain, 15 miles north Ticonderoga, conspicuous in the history of the revolution. It was the most regular and expensive fort constructed by the British in America. It is now in ruins.

[u] Montreal is situated on the east side of an island of the same name, which is formed by Ottawas and St. Lawrence rivers. It is divided into upper and lower towns. Many of the streets are regular but narrow, and the city at first view has a gloomy unpleasant appearance, but has of late been much improved by new and spacious streets, with houses built in a handsome modern style; they are generally of two stories, and covered with sheet iron or tin. The principal buildings are the general hospital, the Hotel Dieu, the convent of Notre Dame, the French cathedral, the English church, the college, the court-house, the government house, bank, &c. There is a considerable elevation about a mile from the city, from which may be had a view of the city, river, and a wide expanse of Champlain country. The population of Montreal is estimated at 19,000.

[v] The capital of British America stands on a promontory on N. W. side of the St. Lawrence, nearly 400 miles from the sea. The promontory is formed by the rivers St. Lawrence and St. Charles, and is the termination of a ridge of land from one to two miles wide, running from E. to W. On the north is cape Diamond rising almost perpendicularly 345 feet above the water. At the N. E. end of this promontory the city is built, and enclosed by fortifications extending across the peninsula, the circuit of which is 2 1-2 miles. It is divided into two parts, upper and lower: the upper town is situated on the side of cape Diamond, which slopes to the north towards St. Charles. It is separated from the lower town by a line of steep rocks, which run from the cape to the west. The lower town is situated immediately under cape Diamond, and communicates with the upper town by a winding street, at the top of which is a fortified gate. The breadth of the principal streets is 32 feet—the houses, generally, are built of stone in an irregular manner, with high sloping roofs. Some of the principal public buildings are, the castle of Louis, the Hotel Dieu, the Protestant and Catholic Cathedrals, the French College, and the Convent of Ursulines. The Plains of Abraham lie on the summit of the heights, which terminate at the river on the west and south side of the city.—Quebec is considered the strongest fortified town in America. The St Lawrence has here 28 fathoms of water, with a safe capacious harbour, sufficient to contain 100 ships of the line. The prospect from the heights of Quebec, combines the most beautiful and sublime objects of nature; “exhibiting, in its environs, the beauty of an European capital, and yet, in winter, smarting with the cold of Siberia.”—Population, upwards of 15,000.

[w] The capital of Washington county, in the valley of Connegocheague, between the Blue Ridge and North Mountain. Population about 3,000, a large proportion of which are Germans. It contains a court house, bank, market house, and four houses of public worship. It is a place of considerable business, being situated in the most fertile part of Maryland.

At Hagerstown, the road forks more northerly, leading through Bedford to Pittsburg, and the other through Cumberland to Wheeling.—They are both turnpikes.

[x] On the top of the high steep mountain between Mercersburg and this town, there is an immense variegated prospect of the Eastern Valley. Here the traveller seems to take a farewell view of the Atlantic regions with “a longing, lingering, look behind.”

[y] A beautiful and interesting town, the capital of Bedford county, on the west branch of Junietta, enclosed by high mountains on nearly all sides; population, about 1,000. A little south of this town are the celebrated Bedford Springs, in a cool recess at the foot of a steep mountain, which is clothed with evergreens, and abounding in botanical treasures. These Hygean fountains and Arcadian bowers, are visited from different motives, by the afflicted and the gay.

[5] After crossing two mountains, each having more eastern ascent than western descent, the traveller here arrives at the great Alleghany, which swells above all the others, yet with such an unassuming gradation, that he often forgets he is on a mountain. This is, generally speaking, a good turnpike road, having excellent houses of entertainment at convenient distances from each other.

[8] A borough and capital of Westmoreland county, Pennsylvania, on a branch of the Sewickly, and in the township of Hempfield. Population 771. It contains a court house, a jail, a bank, an academy, and a German Calvinist Church.

[a] A city, and capital of Alleghany county, situated on a point of land formed by the junction of the Alleghany river from the north, and Monongahela from the south, which here make the Ohio. The local situation of this metropolis of West Pennsylvania, is highly favourable for manufactures and trade, which are already extensively carried on. Pittsburg has rather a low situation, and is constantly enveloped in smoke of the mountain coal, which, with the sable aspect of the houses, arising from the same cause, renders this rather a disagreeable, and "no abiding city," for those who travel for pleasure.—Population, 7,248.

[b] The capital of Trumbull county, Ohio, on Mahoning Creek, a flourishing little town, containing from 50 to 100 houses.

[c] Situated at the entrance of Cuyahoga Creek into Lake Erie, and a place where travellers take water passage to various shores of this, and other connected lakes.

[d] A town, and port of entry on the west bank of Detroit river, in the Michigan Territory, ten miles south of Lake St. Clair, and 20 north of Lake Erie, in latitude 42 deg. 25 minutes, which is nearly the same as the latitude of Boston. This town is well located for trade, and likely to become a flourishing place.—Population, rising, 1,422.

[e] Situated on a cliff above the town of Michilimacinac, and one mile farther is another summit, 150 feet higher, 300 feet above the lake is fort Holmes, from which there is an extensive prospect of lakes Michigan and Huron.

[f] A military post, and seat of justice for Brown county, Michigan, at S. end of Green Bay, near the entrance of Fox river. Here is a settlement extending about 4 miles along the river, consisting of about 80 families, of a mixed race, descendants of French Jesuits, intermarried with the Indians.

[g] The capital of Washington co. Md. on Antietam creek. Population 2,690. It is regularly laid out, and contains a court house, a jail, a market house, a bank, 4 houses of public worship, 1 for German Lutherans, 1 for German Calvinists, 1 for Episcopalians, and 1 for Methodists. A great part of the houses are built of brick and stone. It is situated in a fertile tract of country, and has considerable trade. Two newspapers are published here.

[h] The capital of Alleghany co. Md. It is a considerable town, and contains a court house, a jail, a market house, a bank, and 4 houses of public worship, 1 for Lutherans, 1 for Roman Catholics, 1 for Methodists, and one built jointly by the Presbyterians and Episcopalians. Two newspapers are published here. The mountains in the vicinity abound in stone coal, great quantities of which are transported down the Potomac in flat and keel boats. The great western road, made by the U. S. government, extends from this town to the banks of the Ohio at Wheeling, and a survey has been made from thence to the Mississippi, 600 miles further.

[i] A port and borough of Fayette co. Penn. on the Monongahela at the junction of Dunlap's and Red Stone creeks. Population 976. It is situated at the point where the great Cumberland road strikes the head of navigation of the Monongahela, and has long been a place of embarkation for emigrants to the west. The town has a picturesque site, built on the declivity of a hill, and the most elevated houses being about 300 feet higher than those on the river. It contains a bank, a printing office, a masonic hall, and 4 houses of public worship for Presbyterians, Episcopalians, Quakers, and Methodists. Salt water abounds in the country.

[j] A post-town, Ohio co. Va. on the Ohio; at the mouth of the Wheeling. It is built on a high bank, principally on one street, and contains a court house, a jail, a market house, a bank, a church, about 200 houses, and has some trade and manufactures. The Cumberland road, lately opened, reaches the Ohio at this place.

[k] Capital of Guernsey co. Ohio, on Wells' creek.—Population 300; including the township, 988. It is a thriving town, and contains the county buildings and about 50 dwelling houses.

[l] Huron co. Ohio, which runs into Sandusky bay.

[m] A town in Ohio, at the lower rapids of the Maumee. It has been recently laid out.

(c) This place contains a tavern and a few houses, on the east side of Youghioeny river, over which there is an excellent bridge.

(f) The traveller has now arrived to the summit of the last Mountain, from which towards the W. the eye ranges over one of the most extensive and enchanting of all the landscapes in America. This scene might well be considered worth a journey over the Allegany, if not a "voyage across the Atlantic."

(g) See Page 58.

(h) A pleasant town in Ohio, situated on the Muskingum, capital of a county of the same name. It has several manufactures, one near the town, of copperas. Two bridges are here built across the Muskingum.

(i) A large flourishing town, regularly laid out, the streets crossing each other at right angles. This town is located in a very luxuriant level country, and has large establishments for manufactures of various kinds. It has 3,000 inhabitants, 3 banks, 3 printing offices, and 3 houses of worship.

(j) The metropolis of Kentucky, in Fayette county, containing from 7 to 8000 inhabitants. It is situated on a small branch of the Elk Horn River, and regularly laid out. Its public buildings are a court house, market, theatre, museum, a flourishing university, 3 banks, and 7 houses of worship.

(k) A town of Indiana, on the east bank of the Wabash, 100 miles from its junction with the Ohio, containing between two and 300 houses. Its trade consists mostly in peltry. It has a bank, an academy, and two printing offices.

(l) The seat of Government for Illinois Territory. It is finely situated on the Kaskaska, 11 miles from its mouth, and 6 E. of the Mississippi. It has a good harbour for boats, and contains about 160 houses. The inhabitants are partly French.

(m) St. Louis, chief town of Missouri, stands on the W. bank of the Mississippi, 18 miles below the junction of the Missouri by water, 14 above Merrimack River, 30 below that of Illinois, 200 above that of Ohio, 1,180 above N. Orleans, and 1,100 below the Falls of St. Anthony. It has an elevated and healthy situation, having three streets running parallel with the river, and these intersected by a number of others at right angles — The town extends along the river about two miles. The town contains 3 churches, a land office, 2 banks, a theatre, a museum, and 2 printing offices. The courts are held in one of the buildings of the ancient fort, erected in early times for the defence of the place. This town is peculiarly calculated to be the great emporium of the Western country. Situated in the vicinity of three great rivers, possessing every facility of an extensive commerce, and surrounded with a rich fertile soil, it will probably become a large city. St. Louis was established in 1764, and contains at present nearly 5000 inhabitants.

(n) Platte, La. or Shoal river, North-America, which rises in the Rocky mountains, and after an easterly course of about 1,600 miles, joins the Missouri 600 from the Mississippi.

(o) Columbia river, North America, which rises according to Mackenzie, in the Rocky mountains, about long. 121 west, lat. 54 23 north, within a few miles of the source of the Unjoh or Peace river; and, after a course of about 1,500 miles, it flows into the Pacific Ocean, between Point Adams and Cape Disappointment, long 123. 54. west, lat. 46 19. north. The three great tributaries of this river are the Multnomah, Lewis's river, and Clark's river, all flowing into it on S. E. side; the Multnomah, 139 miles from its mouth, Lewis's river, 413, and Clark's 600 miles. At the point of the junction of Lewis's river the Columbia is 900 yards wide. The tide flows up 133 miles, to within 7 miles of the great rapids. Vessels of 300 tons may reach the Multnomah, and large sloops may ascend as high as the tide. Above the rapids the navigation is good for 65 miles, where it is interrupted by the long narrows; and six miles higher up, i. e. 261 miles above the mouth of the river, it is interrupted by falls of 20 feet perpendicular; above the falls the navigation continues good to the junction of Lewis's river. The portages around these obstructions of the navigation, amount in all to five miles.

The entrance of the Columbia lies between breakers which extend from Cape Disappointment to a point on the southern shore, over a sort of bar or extensive flat. The entrance into the river, and the egress out of it, are difficult at all seasons, and from October to April extremely dangerous; and in the opinion of experienced navigators, it cannot at any season be entered by loaded vessels of 400 tons. The westerly wind prevails on this coast, and the sea breaks on the bar with great violence. The first modern navigator that entered this river, was Mr. Cray, commander of the ship Columbia of Boston.—He entered it in 1791, and since that time the river has been known by the name of Columbia. It was before called the Origon and River of the West.

The country bordering on the Columbia towards the ocean, is covered with heavy timber, consisting almost wholly of fir, of which captains Lewis and Clark mention seven species, some growing to a great height. The soil is fertile, composed of a dark rich loam. The length of the valley from north to south has never been ascertained. The climate is much milder than in the same parallel on the Atlantic coast.

(p) Post town and capital of Dearborn co. Indiana, on the Ohio, two miles below the great Miami, and 22 below Cincinnati. A newspaper is published here.

(q) Post-town and capital of Orange co., Indiana; 27 north Leavenworth, 40 east Vincennes.

(r) Post-town and capital of St. Charles co Missouri, on the Missouri; 21 miles from its mouth, and 13 N. W. of St Louis by land. Population about 12,000. It is a handsome and flourishing village. A weekly newspaper is published here. It is built on a narrow strip of land, between the river and the hills; this space admits only one street, which is about a mile in length.

(s) Franklin, port-town and capital of Howard co Missouri, on north bank of the Missouri, 200 miles above St. Louis, 130 W. N. W. Potosi, west, 1,069. Long. 92 54 west, lat. 38 57 north. Population in 1821, 1,800. This town was laid out in 1816, and in 1821 contained about 500 buildings, some of them handsomely built of brick, others framed, but the greater part of logs. It contains a court-house, a jail, a market-house, a land-office, an academy and a printing office, from which is issued a weekly newspaper. It has about 20 merchantile stores, 10 lawyers, 4 physicians, and a variety of mechanics. It is regularly laid out, the streets 82½ feet wide, with a public square of 2 acres, for the erection of public buildings. It has a healthy situation, in a district of country very fertile and rapidly settling. It is the second town in business and importance in Missouri, and the present western limit of steam boats and other boats.

(t) Kansas, or Kanzas, or Kanzas river, North America, which rises in the Rocky Mountains, and after an easterly course of upwards of 1,200 miles, unites with the Missouri, 340 miles from the Mississippi, in long. 94 20 west. Lat. 38 31 north. It is 340 yards wide at its mouth.

(u) A military post belonging to the United States, on east bank of the Missouri, about 50 miles above the junction of the La Platte, and 650 above the junction of the Missouri with the Mississippi. Long. 96 42 west, lat. 41 31 north. It is an important station, the highest up the Missouri, that is occupied by the United States as a military position.

(v) This river rises in the S. Eastern part of the State, taking a N. Western course, enters Ohio, about 80 miles above Louisville. During the most rainy months of the year, it is navigable for small batteaux about 200 miles. Its banks are bold and rocky.

(w) Salt river, Kentucky, which runs N. W. into the Ohio, twenty miles below the Rapids. It is navigable for boats sixty miles.

(x) The seat of Justice for Breckenridge county, Kentucky, 60 miles S. W. of Louisville.

(y) Green River rises in the S. Eastern part of Kentucky. It has first a W. then a N. W. course into Ohio River. Its whole course is about 200 miles, through a most fertile, romantic, and interesting country.

(z) Shawneetown, Capital of Gallatin county, Illinois, on Ohio River, about 10 miles below the mouth of the Wabash. It contains a bank, printing office, and United States land office.

(8.) Kaskaskia River has a S. W. course into the Mississippi, about 60 miles below the entrance of Missouri. It flows through a fertile region, having a very high bank part of the distance.—Some of the best land in the State of Illinois, is between this River and the Mississippi.

(a) A river in Virginia, which flows into the Ohio, 12 miles below Wheeling. Little Grave Creek flows into the Ohio about a mile above. Near the mouth of the stream is an alluvial tract about two miles square, on which are found remains of ancient works, as tumuli, mounds, &c. The Big Grave, so called, one quarter of a mile from the Ohio, is a remarkable monument, 300 yards in circumference, and 100 in diameter at the base, 45 in diameter at the summit, and 90 high. It contains many thousands of human skeletons.

(b) Capital of Washington county, Ohio, on the Ohio, 178 miles by water, below Pittsburg, 237 above Cincinnati, 93 E. by N. Chillicothe, 109 S. E. Columbus, west 307. Long. 81 19 west. Lat. 39 25 north. It is pleasantly situated immediately above the mouth of the Muskingum, and contains a court-house, a jail, a market-house, a bank, an academy, a land-office, a printing-office, two houses of public worship, about 20 stores, and 90 dwelling houses. A considerable part of this town experiences the inconvenience of being almost annually overflowed by water.—Population of the township, 2,136.—About one half mile from the junction of the Muskingum with the Ohio, are remains of extensive ancient works, consisting of walls and mounds of earth, in direct lines, and also in square and circular forms. The largest square fort contains 40 acres, and is inclosed by a wall of earth from six to eight feet high, and from 25 to 36 wide at the base.

(c) This Island, famous as having been the spot where a conspiracy, or more properly, a Quixotic invasion of Mexico was deliberately determined on. It contains about 300 acres of excellent land, over the whole of which hemp has been most profitably cultivated. It is 13 miles below Marietta.

(d) Mason county, Va. 5 miles N.E. of Gallipolis, just above the confluence of the Great Kanhawa with the Ohio. Kanhawa, (Great) rises from different streams in the western part of N. Carolina, and pursuing a N. Westerly direction through the rough region in the western part of Virginia, discharges itself into the Ohio about 90 miles below Marietta, and 260 from Pittsburg. It admits batteaux navigation through a great part of its course.

(e) Capital of Gallia county, O. on N. W. side of the Ohio. It is handsomely situated on an elevated bank of the river, and has a Court House, an Academy, and nearly 1000 inhabitants.

(f) Capital of Sciota county, Ohio, on the E bank of the Sciota, just above its junction with the Ohio River—45 S. of Chillicothe, 44 W. of Gallipolis. Population between 5 and 600.

(g) A post-town, in Mason county, Kentucky, on the Ohio; 3 miles N. E. of Washington, 60 N. E. of Lexington, and 63 above Cincinnati. Population about 1,500. It is a flourishing town, and contains a glass manufactory, a printing-office, &c. It has more trade than any other town in Kentucky, on the Ohio, above Louisville. The site on which it is built is pleasant, but confined, not more than 50 rods wide, and the hills in its rear rise abruptly to the height of 450 feet.

(h) City and Capital of Hamilton county, O. on N. bank of the Ohio, 20 miles above the mouth of the Great Miami, having 1,900 houses, and in 1820, 9,642 inhabitants. Cincinnati was laid out in 1788, and began to flourish in 1794, since which its growth in population, wealth, and trade, has been remarkably rapid. Its situation is high, pleasant, and healthy. It contains a court house, 3 brick market houses, 4 banks, library, hospital, museum, 4 printing offices, and 10 places of worship. Its manufactures are various and extensive.

(i) Port of entry, and capital of Jefferson county, Kentucky, on the Ohio, at the head of the rapids, 122 miles below Cincinnati, 52 west of Frankfort, 137 south of E. Vincennes, west 517. Long. 85 30 west. Lat. 38 3 north. Population in 1810, 1,357; in 1820, 4,012. It is a flourishing town, next to Lexington, the most considerable in the state. It is pleasantly situated, being built on an eminence which is 70 feet high, gently descending to a narrow plain along the bank of the river. It contains two banks, one of which is a branch of the U. S. bank; two printing-offices, an academy, various other public buildings, and several rope-walks and manufactories.

The three principal streets run parallel with the river. From the front street, there is a fine prospect of the rapids and of the shore, and hills on the opposite side of the river. A company has been incorporated by the legislature of Kentucky, for the purpose of opening a canal on the Kentucky side of the rapids. An extensive commerce is now carried on from this town, with Natchez, New-Orleans, and St. Louis.

(j) Capital of St. Genevieve county, Missouri, Population, 1,500.—This town was formerly built on the river bank, and is said to have contained once 7,000 inhabitants. The ground on which it stands is somewhat higher than the river bottom, and it begins to extend itself back upon ground considerably more elevated. On an elevation in the rear of the town a handsome stone building has been erected for an academy, which commands a fine prospect. This town contains a court-house, a jail, a catholic chapel, a branch of the Missouri bank, and about 300 houses.

Natchez west 727. Population 3 or 4,000—Long. 87 3 W. Lat. 35 45 N.—It is pleasantly situated, regularly laid out, and contains a court-house, a jail, a market-house, 2 banks, a young ladies' academy, a public library of 1,200 vols., a cotton and woollen manufactory, a rope walk, 2 distilleries, and 3 houses of public worship, 1 for Presbyterians, 1 for Methodists, and 1 for Baptists. It is a thriving and wealthy town, the largest in the state, and is situated in a fertile and populous country and has a flourishing trade. Two newspapers are published here. There is a steam-boat navigation from Nashville to New Orleans. The Cumberland is navigable to this place for vessels of 30 or 40 tons, 9 months in the year, and at certain times for ships of 400 tons. The distance of Nashville from New-Orleans by land, through Natchez, is 586 miles. A road is opening through Madisonville, distance 430 miles.—Cumberland College was incorporated here in 1806, and a building about 90 feet long, and three stories high, was erected; but the college has not gone into operation, and a grammar school is kept in the building.

(l) City and port of entry, Adams county, Mississippi, on E. bank of the Mississippi, 322 miles above New-Orleans, by the course of the river, 427 above the mouth of the stream, 969 below the mouth of the Ohio, 816 below St. Louis, 1513 below Pittsburgh; 156 by land N. W. New Orleans, 90 west Mountcento 430 S. W. by S. Nashville, W. 1,263. Long. 91 25 west, Lat. 31 34 north. Population in 1810, 1,511; in 1820, 2,184, slaves, 356. It is much the largest town in Mississippi, and has till lately been the seat of government. It consists of two parts, the upper and lower towns; the former is situated on the margin of the river; the latter, which is the principal part, on ground elevated about 160 feet above high water mark in the river. The city is regularly laid out in the form of a parallelogram, the streets intersecting each other at right angles, but the site on which it is built is very uneven. It contains a court house, a jail, a market house, a bank, an academy, two printing offices, and two houses of public worship, one for Roman Catholics, and one for Presbyterians.

Some of the houses are elegant, but they are mostly of wood and of only one story. To enable the inhabitants to enjoy the evening air, almost every house has piazza and balcony. The gardens are ornamented with fig trees, plums, peaches, and grape-vines.—It is a wealthy trading town, well situated for a commercial depot, having a fertile and well cultivated country in its rear, which produces great quantities of cotton.

[m] A small town in Virginia, on the point of land, formed by the junction of Potomac River from the N. W. and Shannandoah from the S. W. just where the two united rivers rend asunder the Blue Ridge. This is one of the greatest natural curiosities in America. Here is an United States' armoury, which employs from 2 to 300 workmen.

[n] Winchester is one of the largest towns in the valley between the Potomac River and Tennessee. It is the Capital of Frederick county, and one of the largest and most wealthy towns in Virginia. The town has mostly a low situation, extending along one street about a mile. Population between 3 and 4000. This valley road continues for hundreds of miles from N. E. to S. W. in sight of the Blue Ridge E. and North Mountain W.—The land is the best in Virginia.

[o] Harrisonburg, post-town and capital of Rockingham county, Virginia; 30 miles N. N. E. Staunton, 75 S. S. W. of Winchester, 144 W. S. W. Richmond. Population about 1,000. It is a pleasant and well built town, and contains a court-house a jail, and an Episcopal church; all built of slate-stone, which is very common in this part of Virginia, and a Methodist meeting-house of wood.

[p] Staunton, port and capital Augusta county, Virginia; 40 miles W. N. W. Charlottesville, 95 S. W. Winchester, 120 W. N. W. Richmond. It is delightfully situated in a healthy part of the country, regularly laid out, and contains 2 court-houses, a jail, an academy, 3 churches, and had, in 1818, about 1,500 inhabitants. About 12 miles N. W. of the town there is a sulphur spring, which was discovered in 1815, and is now much visited.

[q] The Capital of Knox county, Tennessee, on the Holstein River, 22 miles above its junction with the Tennessee River, in lat. 35 dg. 45 N. It is regularly laid out on a handsome site, and contains 2000 inhabitants.

[r] Kingston, post-town and capital of Roane county, Tennessee, at the confluence of the Clinch and Tennessee rivers; 65 W. Knoxville.

[s] M'Minnville, post-town and capital of Warren county, Tennessee, 35 E. by S. Murfreesborough. Long. 87 7 W. Lat. 35 43 N. Pop. in 1810, 120.

[t] The Capital of the State of Tennessee since 1817. It is situated on an eminence, which falls away in every direction.—Population 1500.

[u] The Capital of Davidson county, situated on the S. side of Cumberland River, containing 4000 inhabitants. This is a flourishing town, the largest in the State, in the midst of a rich and populous country. The above named River is navigable to this town for vessels of 40 tons. A steam boat also plies between this and New Orleans.

[r] St. Francis river Missouri and Arkansas, which rises in the mining district, Missouri, flows southerly, and joins the Mississippi, 107 miles above the Arkansas, in Lat 34 45 N.—It is navigable about 250 miles; at this distance the navigation is obstructed by trees, brushwood, &c., otherwise it might be navigated to within 14 miles of St Michael's. The country watered by it affords some excellent land, mixed with some that is rocky; towards the mouth, there is much that is swampy, low, and overflown.

[w] White river, Arkansas territory, which rises among the Pawnee mountains, about Long. 97 W. Lat. 36 N., and after a very serpentine course of about 1,300 miles, joins the Mississippi 50 miles above the mouth of the Arkansas. It is said to be navigable for boats, 1,200 miles, and is 150 yards wide at its mouth. Its waters are clear and transparent, formed from springs flowing from the flinty hills that are found, for more than half its course, within a few miles of, and often immediately on, its banks. A great portion of the country, therefore, through which it flows, is rough and sterile, but the immediate margin of the river uniformly presents a strip of the richest alluvial bottom land, from one quarter of a mile to 1 1-2 wide, eminently adapted to purposes of agriculture. The water of White river is so transparent that a pin may be seen 10 or 15 feet below the surface.

[x] Grand Lake, Louisiana. Longitude 93 5 W. Latitude, 32 N.

[y] Or Natchitoches river, North-America, which rises about 100 N. E. Santa Fe, in Mexico, Long. 105 W. Lat. 35 N., and after a very serpentine course of about 1,500 miles in Mexico, between Mexico and Arkansas, and through Louisiana, flows into the Mississippi, 240 miles above New-Orleans, in Long. 91 48 W. Lat. 31 15 N.—The navigation of Red river is interrupted at a place called the Rapide, 135 miles from its mouth, by a ledge of soft rock of the consistence of pipe clay, which extends across the river, but might be easily removed. No difficulty, however, is experienced at present, except in low water. A more formidable obstruction is found in those natural bridges, formed by the accumulation of drift wood, under which the current of this great river passes for several miles. They have remained unbroken for so long a period, that they have acquired a soil and a growth of timber similar to the surrounding country.

[z] Baton Rouge, East, parish, Louisiana. Population, 5,220.

[a] English Turn, bend, in the Mississippi, 16 miles below New-Orleans. It is so called, because the English ships, in their first attempt on the city, after proceeding thus far, were obliged to return.

[b] A city and port of entry in the District of Columbia, on the S Bank of Potomac River, and nearly at the head of tide water. Alexandria is a neat regular city, containing a Court House, Theatre, Museum, 6 Banks, a handsome Market House, and 8 houses of worship, and a population of 8213. It is well situated for commerce, and has considerable—the principal articles of which are flour, indian corn, and tobacco.

[c] Dumfries, post-town, port of entry, and capital of Prince William county, Virginia, on the Quantico, which falls into the Potomac, 3 miles below the town; 33 miles S. of Washington, 90 N. of Richmond. Long. 77 28 W. Latitude, 38 40 N. It contains a court-house, a jail, a meeting-house, a large ware-house, and about 250 buildings; and has some trade. The Quantico is navigable as far as to the town for boats of 20 tons. At the mouth of the river there is a very handsome and excellent harbour. The shipping owned here in 1816, amounted to 1,956 tons.

[d] On the S. W. side of the Rappahannoc. This town has an extensive trade. Its annual exports amount to nearly 4,000,000, principally flour and tobacco. Fredericksburg is 70 miles above the Tappahannock, at which port is entered the shipping of this town. Population between 3 and 4000.

[e] Dinwiddie county, Virginia, on S bank of the Appomattox, just below the falls, 12 miles above its junction with James river, at City Point, 25 S. by E. Richmond. Longitude, 77 31 W. Latitude 37 18 N. Population in 1810, 5,663; in 1820, 6,690; whites, 3,117, slaves, 2,078. It contains a court-house, a jail, a masonic hall, 2 banks, 1 insurance office, an academy, which had, in 1818, upwards of 100 students; 12 or 14 tobacco warehouses, 8 flour mills, and 5 houses of public worship, 1 for Presbyterians, 1 for Episcopalians, 1 for Methodists, and 2 for Baptists. It is one of the handsomest and most commercial towns in the state, and has a large trade in tobacco and flour. The shipping owned here in 1816, amounted to 5,754 tons. The Appomattox is navigable as far as the town for vessels carrying 100 tons.

[f] The Capital of North Carolina, in Wake county, containing about 2000 inhabitants. This is a beautiful and very respectable town, in the centre of which is a square containing 10 acres, from which run 4 streets. On this square stands the Capitol or State House, a brick building, 102 by 56, and between 40 and 50 feet high.

[g] The Capital of Cumberland county, N. Carolina, a little S. of Cape Fear River, on a Sandy plain. This town is advantageously situated as an intermediate emporium between the upper part of the State and the sea board. It is a straggling town of considerable extent, containing 3000 inhabitants, a Court House, Academy, 3 Banks, 2 Printing Offices, and 3 houses of worship.

It is a pleasant town, regularly laid out, and contains a court house, a jail, an academy, and four places of public worship; 1 for Presbyterians, 1 for Episcopalians, 1 for Baptists, and 1 for Methodists, and has considerable trade. The surrounding country is fertile and pleasant.—The Wateree is navigable to this place for boats of 70 tons.—Two battles were fought here during the revolutionary war; one on the 16th of August, 1780, between General Gates and Lord Cornwallis, in which the Americans were defeated; the other on the 25th of April, 1781, between General Greene and Lord Rawdon. The Americans had 126 killed, and 100 taken prisoners. The British had about 100 killed.

[i] Capital of S. Carolina, situated near the junction of Broad and Saluda Rivers, which unitedly form the Congaree.—The land gradually ascends from the river for one mile, where commences a plain containing the site of the town, which is handsomely laid out in regular streets 100 feet wide. The public buildings here are the State House, Court House, a Bank, the Columbia College, and 4 houses of worship, and between 3 and 4000 inhabitants.

[j] Capital of Richmond county, Ga. on the Savannah; lon. 80 46 W. Lat. 33 19 N. Population in 181 , 2,476; in 1820, upwards of 4,000. It contains a court-house, a jail, a market-house, an academy, an insurance office, 3 banks, one of which is a branch of the United States' Bank, and 4 houses of public worship; 1 for Presbyterians, 1 for Roman Catholics, 1 for Methodists, and 1 for Episcopalians.

[k] The Capital of Georgia, situated on the Oconoe, a branch of the Altamaha River, 300 miles from the sea, pursuing the course of the river. It has a high, healthy situation, and a very fertile country around it. The public buildings are a large brick Capitol, a Court House, a Bank, an Academy, and 2 Churches. Population 2000.

[l] Capital of Washington county, Al. on W. side of Tombigbee. The river is navigable to this place for vessels drawing 8 or 10 feet of water, at all seasons, and during 6 months of the year, for such vessels as can reach Mobile. Population upwards of 1000.

[m] Florence, apital of Lauderdale county, Al. on N. Bank of the Tennessee. Its site is 120 feet above the surface of the River. The streets are 100 feet wide, and intersect each other at right angles.

[n] Rises near the Muscle Shoals, in Tennessee, and mingles with Alabama River 45 miles above Mobile Bay, navigable to Fort Stoddard for large vessels. This River is in length 4 or 5 hundred miles.

[x] Rises from the Alleghany Mountains, on the borders of N. Carolina. It crosses the State of Ten in a S. westerly direction, enters Alabama, then pursuing a westerly course of 150 or 200 miles, takes a northern, and crosses the State of Tennessee again, the western part of the State of Kentucky, and joins the Ohio 12 miles below the Cumberland, and 46 above the Mississippi. It is in length 1100 miles. At some seasons of the year, it is navigable for steam boats 259 miles to Florence, in Alabama, at the lower end of Muscle Shoals, and for boats at all seasons. Above the Shoals boats pass without obstruction 250 miles to the Whil, where the river breaks through the Cumberland Mountains.

[y] Capital of Alabama, W. side of Alabama River, at the junction of Cahawba River. In 1820, it was established the seat of government for 5 years. It contains a brick State House, a Church, a Land Office, an Academy, and 2 Printing Offices, from each of which is issued a newspaper.

[z] Fredericksburg, post-town, Spottsylvania county, Virginia, on S. W. side of the Rappahannoc; 70 miles above Tappahannoc, 68 N. Richmond. Longitude 77 38 W. Latitude 38 34 N.—Population in 1812, 2,550, and in 1817, 3,255.—It is pleasantly situated, regularly laid out, and is one of the most healthy, flourishing, and commercial towns in the state. It contains a court-house, a jail, a spacious town-house, a market house, a masonic hall, a Lancasterian school, a tobacco warehouse, 2 banks, and 4 houses of public worship, 1 for Episcopalians, 1 for Presbyterians, 1 for Baptists, and 1 for Methodists. Nearly 100 of the houses are of brick. It is the seat of the superior court of law and of chancery for the district.—This town exports large quantities of corn and flour, and considerable quantities of tobacco, flax-seed, pease, and beans. The annual amount of exports is about 4,000,000 dollars. On the waters of the Rappahannoc, within two miles of the town, there are eight flour mills. The river is navigable as far as this place for vessels of 130 or 140 tons, having 9 1-2 feet of water. The shipping of this town is entered at the port of Tappahannoc.

Much of the surrounding country is fertile, well-cultivated, and contains many fine plantations.

[a] Pamunky river, Virginia, formed by the North and South Anna. It runs S. E. and unites with the Mattapony, to form York river.

[b] James River is formed by the union of Jackson and Cowpasture Rivers. At the point where it begins to break through the Blue Ridge, it is joined by N. River. It passes Linchburg, Richmond, City Point, and Jamestown, communicating with the Atlantic through Hampton Roads and the mouth of the Chesapeake Bay. This River flows through a fertile country, abounding in tobacco, wheat, corn, hemp, coal, &c.

[d] Monticello, post-town and capital Jasper county, Georgia: 35 N. W. Milledgeville, 110 W. Augusta, 178 N. W. Savannah. Long. 83 47 W. Lat. 33 25 N. Population about 800. It has a healthy and pleasant situation, and a fertile country, is a handsome and well built town, and contains a court-house, a Presbyterian and Methodist meeting-house, and an academy, which had in 1821, 4 teachers and 120 students. Indian springs, the most celebrated mineral waters in Georgia, are 16 W. Monticello.

[e] Rises in the Appalachian Mountains, and running across N. W. part of Georgia, forms a part of the W. boundary of the State, dividing it from Alabama. In lat. 30, 45, N. it receives Kent river, and takes the name of Appalachicola.

[f] At this town, which has already been briefly described, the great Southern road forks, one bearing S. and by W. to Columbia, &c. and the other about S. through Georgetown, Charleston, &c. The country, after leaving Virginia, becomes nearly a dead level, with a light poor soil, which for hundreds of miles is covered with dwarfish pine trees. Here is nothing interesting to relieve the traveller's eye, or prevent his sleeping, if in the mail stage, except the breaking of a stage wheel, or a rotten pine bridge, which is not unfrequent. The Southern road between Richmond and Charleston, crosses the following Rivers, which rise near the Alleghany range of Mountains, W. from the road, and enter the Atlantic Easterly from this, viz. the Roanoke, Tar, Neuse, and Cape Fear Rivers, in N. Carolina; the L. Pedee, Great Pedee, Santee, and Cooper Rivers, in S. Carolina; the Savannah, Ogeechee, and Altamaha Rivers, in Georgia. Savannah River is the boundary line between the two last mentioned States.

[g] Georgetown is situated at the mouth of Sampit River, on Winhaw Bay. It is regularly laid out in very spacious streets, most of which are so little trod, that they appear mere grass plats or pastures. On the wharves there is the business and bustle of a commercial town. Considerable trade is here carried on with the upper country and with Charleston. It contains a Court House, a Bank, an Academy, and 4 Churches, and about 2000 inhabitants.

[h] Situated on a high sandy bluff, on the N. Channel of the Altamaha, near its entrance into St. Simon's Sound, with a population of 1000. It has lately become flourishing, and exertions are making to improve the navigation of the rivers in its vicinity.

[i] Camden county, Georgia, at the mouth of St. Mary's River, which divides Georgia from E. Florida. It was a place of some trade during the late war, but has since declined. The shipping amounted in 1816 to nearly 1000 tons. Population 771.

[j] St. John's river, East Florida, which rises in a swamp in the southern part, flows southerly, and runs into the Atlantic about 30 miles N. of St. Augustine. It is a large river, about 300 miles long, spreads into broad bays and lakes, of which the largest is Lake George. It is navigable for vessels drawing about 10 feet, 150 miles to Lake George. It has a bar at its mouth, with about 10 feet of water, and liable to shift.

[k] City of E. Florida, on a bay of the Atlantic, 2 miles within the bar, opposite to the inlet, N. of St. Anastasia Island. It has a good port, but the bar at its entrance is not passable for vessels drawing more than 8 feet of water. The town is built on a peninsula of an oblong form, consisting of 4 principal streets, which intersect each other at right angles. The houses are mostly built of stone, 500 in number, many of them in a state of decay. It is defended by a fort built of stone, 20 feet high, with walls 12 feet thick, and mounting 36 guns. St. Augustine has a pleasant situation, with the advantage of refreshing sea breezes. This town was burnt by Sir F. Drake in 1586, by Captain Davis with the buccaniers in 1685, and again burnt by the English in 1702. In 1821 a treaty was signed, by which Florida was ceded to the United States. The population was formerly estimated at 5000, but is now reduced to less than 3000. The surrounding country is low, but well adapted to the cultivation of fruits and plants of a Southern climate.

[l] New-Smyrna, town, East Florida, inhabited by a colony of Greek and Minorquines, established by Doctor Turnbull, on a branch of the Musquito river, about 16 miles above the capes of that river, 30 N. Cape Carnaveral. Lat. 28 N.

[m] There is very little to interest a person on this road, which runs down the Maryland side of the Potomac river, and occasionally in sight of it. Port Tobacco is a little old town on the decline. It is the seat of Justice for Charles county, situated on a creek four miles from the Potomac.

[n] Newport, post-town, Charles county, Md.; 11 S. E. Port Tobacco.

[o] The capital of St. Mary's county, on Britton's Creek, five miles from the Potomac. It contains a few indifferent houses, with no probability of its increasing: Part of the place was burnt by the British in the late war.

[p] Here was made the first European settlement in the state of Maryland, and at the "City of St. Mary's" the colony legislature first sat, and many of its first laws were dated there. The city, as laid out, extended ten miles. An old dilapidating Catholic church, and now and then a lonely farm-house, show where 'Troy might once have stood.'

[q] Point Lookout is a very narrow strip of land, in a bleak situation, at the junction of Potomac river and Chesapeake bay. Here a surf, almost equal to that of the ocean, rolls from this American Mediterranean, with broken murmers, against this lonely shore.

[r] A city and capital of Maryland, situated on the S. W. bank of Severn river, two miles from its entrance into Chesapeake bay. This city is not laid out with much regularity, and is on a very uneven surface. The capitol is an elegant high building, from the site of which there is a very extensive prospect of the Chesapeake with its islands and winding shores.—Population, from 2 to 3,000. Considering its local advantages, Annapolis is a place of very little business.

[s] From Annapolis there is a ferry to Kent island, and from the island on the Eastern Shore of Maryland. This is a level country, with a light soil, but thick population.

[t] The capital of Delaware State, on Jones Creek, seven miles from its entrance into Delaware Bay. Dover contains 1,000 inhabitants. Here is a handsome state-house, standing on the square or green in the centre of the town, an academy, a bank, and two houses of worship.

[v] Hallowell is situated on Kennebeck river, forty-three miles from its mouth. The principal village of Hallowell is situated on a basin, the west side of the river, where are ten wharves. It has a considerable extensive commerce: the exports consist of beef, pork, pot and pearl ashes, corn, wheat, rye, oats, butter, hay, lumber, fish. The village is built mostly on three streets, two of which are parallel with the river, and contains two houses of worship, two printing-offices, and nearly two thousand inhabitants. Besides the principal village, there are two other small ones within the township.

[w] Capital of Kennebeck county, Maine, on west bank of Kennebeck river, (across which, at this place, there is an excellent bridge,) a pleasant small town, with some trade; the river is navigable to this place for vessels of 100 tons.

[x] Hancock co. Maine. Population in 1820, 2,026. It is delightfully situated on Belfast bay, at the mouth of a small river of the same name, and at the N. W. part of Penobscot bay. It has a good harbour, and great maritime advantages, and is a flourishing town. It has an academy and a printing office.

[y] Kennebeck county, on E. side of Kennebec river. This is a large agricultural town, containing between two and 3,000 inhabitants.

[z] A pleasantly situated town on the west bank of the Penobscot, and contains an academy and theological seminary, called the Maine Charity School, intended for the education of poor pious young men for the ministry.

[&] The capital of Penobscot county, Maine, at the head of the tide and navigation, on west side of Penobscot river. It contains a court-house, bank, athanæum, and printing-office.—This is a pleasantly situated, and very flourishing town favourably located for commerce. The river is navigable for vessels of 3 to 400 tons, to the town.

[a] This is the largest river in the state of Maine: it rises in the western part of the state, and flows E. by S. till it unites with the eastern branch, fifty-four miles in a right line N. by E. Bangor. After the junction, it holds a general course, S. by W. till it flows into the head of Penobscot bay. The towns on the west side of the river, beginning at the head of navigation, are, Bangor, Hampden, Frankfort, Prospect, Belfast, Northport, Lincolnville, Camden, and Thomastown; on the east side, Brewer, Orington, Bucksport, Orland, Penobscot, Castine, Sedgwick, and Deer Isle. Penobscot Bay enters between the Isle of Holt and Owls' Head; it is eighteen miles wide, and in length, from north to south, about thirty.

[c] Kennebec county, Maine, on the W. side of the Kennebec, handsomely situated at the head of boat navigation, opposite Teconic Falls, which display a beautiful cascade. This town is a fine situation for mill seats, being intersected by several streams; it has considerable trade, and well situated for ship building. The Maine Literary and Theological Institution, under the superintendence of the Baptist denomination, is located at this place.—Population, from one to two thousand.

[d] Post-town, Somerset county, Maine, on the Kennebec; 9 miles S. Norridgewock, 196 miles N. N. E. Boston. Population, 1,609.

[e] Post-town, Somerset county, Maine, on W side of Kennebec, opposite Canaan; 5 E. Norridgewock. Population, 889. It is a considerable town, and contains an academy.—Here is a bridge across the Kennebec.

[f] Pleasantly situated on both sides of the Kennebec river, over which, at this place, is an excellent bridge. It is the capital of Somerset county, and is a place of considerable trade, with nearly 1,000 inhabitants.

[g] Anson, post-town, Somerset county, Maine, on W. side of the Kennebec; 12 N. W. Norridgewock, 206 NNE. Boston. Population, in 1810, 633—in 1820, 948.

[h] Kennebec river has its rise on the confines of Canada.—It has two principal branches—the eastern and western: the former rises from Moosehead Lake, and the latter called Dead River, interlocks with the sources of the Chaudiere. The two branches unite about twenty miles below Moosehead Lake, and the river afterwards pursues a southerly course, and flows into the Atlantic between Phipsburg and Georgetown. It is joined by the Androscoggin eighteen miles from the sea. There are several falls on this river, and several bridges across it. The river flows through a very fertile tract of country: the principal towns on the river are, Bath, Gardiner, Hallowell, Augusta, Waterville, Bloomfield, and Norridgewock.

[i] Mount Vernon, post-town, Kennebec county, Maine; 18 N. W. Augusta, 170 N. N. E. Boston. Population 1,293.

[u] Fryeburg, Oxford county, Maine, on the Saco. This is a handsome, pleasantly situated village; in its vicinity are made large quantities of sugar from the maple tree.—Here is a respectable academy.—Population rising 1000.

[r] The White Mountains are the highest points of land in New-England, and at first view, present no opening by which the traveller can gain the opposite side; but, by some extraordinary effort of nature, a passage has been forced, forming a communication between the opposite sides of the mountain, which the art of man could hardly have accomplished. The part of the passage which appears to have been forcibly sundered, is about a quarter of a mile long, and a part of that distance is only just wide enough for a road, and a small brook which runs by its side. This passage was well known to the Indians, who used to convey their captives through it to Canada; but it was discovered to the whites by two settlers while hunting, who were rewarded with a large tract of land by the State of New-Hampshire. The roads, in the vicinity of the mountains, as might be expected, are rough, hilly, and sometimes dangerous.

The roads in Maine, generally speaking, are remarkably good, considering how recently many parts of the state have been settled.

[w] York county, Maine, on the east side of Salmon Fall River. There is a considerable village in the vicinity of Berwick, at a landing near the falls in the river. Both together contained between 4 and 5,000 inhabitants, but they were divided in 1814. Berwick is a pleasantly situated town of considerable business.

[x] The village of Dover is situated at the head of Cochecho, and contains a court-house, bank, printing-office, and 2 houses of public worship. It has several mills and manufactories.—Population, 2,300.

[y] Situated on N. W. side of Great Bay, Strafford county, New-Hampshire. The chief thing in this town remarkable, is a rock weighing 60 or 70 tons, lying so exactly poised on another rock, as to be easily moved with one hand. This town contains about 1500 inhabitants.

[z] Pleasantly situated at the head of tide water, on Exeter River, New-Hampshire. This is one of the most important towns in the state; its manufactures are extensive, comprising woollen, cotton, paper, small arms, and various other manufactories and mills. The town is most noted for its academy, founded by the Hon. John Phillips, in 1781.—It is a very flourishing and well endowed institution, with a handsome library and philosophical apparatus. The building is 76 feet by 36; in the department of languages, students are prepared for college. A course of theological instruction is given to the several classes.

[c] Piscataqua River, New-Hampshire, rises in Wakefield, separating Maine from N. Hampshire, during a S. S. E. course of about 40 miles, and flows into the Atlantic below Portsmouth. The tributary waters of Piscataqua, open a navigation to S. Berwick, Dover, New-Market, Durham, and Exeter. The harbour formed by the mouth of this river, is one of the best on the Atlantic coast.

[d] Situated near the centre of the town of Stratford, New-Hampshire, on the W. side of Salmon Fall River, containing a court-house, cotton factory, and about 50 dwelling houses.

[e] Ossipee Lake, in New-Hampshire, is chiefly remarkable on account of the handsome scenery it presents. It is 1,000 rods long from N. to S. and 600 broad.

[f] The capital of Coos county, New-Hampshire, on the Connecticut, opposite Guildhall, with which it is connected by a bridge; the village is pleasantly situated, about a mile from the Connecticut, on Israel's River.—It contains an academy, and court-house, and church.

[g] Capital of New-Hampshire, situated on both sides of the Merrimac River, in latitude 43 12, containing between 2 and 3,000 inhabitants. The town is delightfully situated, the houses extending along the road or street, nearly two miles. The state-house is an elegant building, and finely situated; there are also a court-house, 2 churches, 2 banks, and 3 printing offices. The business and prosperity of this town are much promoted by means of a canal, which connects it with Boston, called the Middlesex canal, making an inland water communication of 62 miles.

[h] Is a town of some note in New-England, situated on the S. E. side of the Merrimac, it consists of 2 parishes, and contains 2 academies, one called the Franklin, and the other Phillips' Academy; and also, the Theological Seminary, or Andover Institution, well endowed and pleasantly situated. Population, between 3 and 4,000

[i] Winnipiseogee Lake, in Strafford county, New-Hampshire; is 20 miles long, and 14 broad where widest; of a very irregular form, containing a number of islands.

The vicinity of Winnipiseogee Lake, and of the White Mountains, in New-Hampshire, is said to present scenery the most grand and beautiful. From the summit of the mountain may be had a delightful view of the adjacent country many miles: the Winnipiseogee Lake appears just at its base, and the ocean may be seen 65 miles distant from the nearest point of the shore. But the most desirable view is that which the weather-beaten sailor takes on his home bound voyage, when the practised eye alone can distinguish its looming summit from the contiguous clouds.

[j] Strafford county, New-Hampshire, a large township.—Gilmanton, including Gilford, has a population of between 4 and 5,000, and contains 5 houses of worship, a cotton and nail manufactory, and a respectable academy. The court of common pleas, for the county of Strafford, is held alternately at Gilmanton and Rochester, and the superior court at Dover.

[k] Grafton county, New-Hampshire, on the Connecticut, opposite Newbury, with which it is connected by a bridge. The courts for the county are held alternately here and at Plymouth. It is a pleasant village of considerable business, and contains a court-house, academy, and about 60 dwelling houses.

[l] Connecticut river, the most noted in New-England, rises on the north border of New-Hampshire, and separates New-Hampshire from Vermont; it then passes through Massachusetts and Connecticut, into Long Island Sound. Its whole length is 410 miles. It is navigable for vessels drawing 8 feet of water, to Hartford, and by means of canals, it has been made navigable for boat- 250 miles above Hartford, to Bath, New Hampshire. There are several falls on this river, the most remarkable of which is Bellows Falls. It flows through a luxuriant fertile country, and on its banks are a greater number of handsome flourishing towns and villages than can be found on any other river in the United States.

[m] A valuable agricultural town, with a small village containing an academy and congregational church.

[n] Dartmouth College was founded in 1769. The institution consists of two handsome buildings—one called College Hall, 150 by 50 feet, three stories high: the other, styled Medical Hall, a brick edifice of three stories, with a laboratory, a room for the anatomical museum, two lecture rooms, and several other rooms for medical students, besides a chapel and dining hall.—The library contains about 4,000 volumes. The usual number of under-graduates has been for several years past, about 150.

The college is situated in the town of Hanover, a pleasant and healthy village, on E. side of Connecticut river, containing about 60 houses.

[o] Amherst, New-Hampshire, is an agreeable village, built on a handsome plain, containing a church and printing office.—The Souhegan flows through the southern part of the town, affording seats for a number of mills and manufactories. Population, nearly 2,000.

[p] Cheshire county, New-Hampshire, lies on the S. side of the Grand Monadnock Mountain, in the vicinity of which is a mineral spring, and where have been discovered black lead, copperas, alum, and sulphur.

The mountain is 3,254 feet above the level of the sea; the diameter of its base is 5 miles from N. to S. and 3 from E. to W. It may be seen in a circuit of 60 miles distance. Its top consists of a bare rock.

[q] Brattleborough, Vermont, is a flourishing town of considerable trade; it contains two parishes, in each of which there is a village. The principal village is in East Parish, on the Connecticut, over which there is a bridge at this place. Printing is here carried on extensively, particularly that of the Scriptures. Two weekly newspapers are likewise printed here.

[r] Another pleasant town of Vermont, situated in a fertile country, on the borders of New-York State. It contains two furnaces, 2 cotton, and 2 woollen manufactories, besides 1 of ochre, 2 paper-mills, an academy, and a valuable quarry of marble. A cave on Mount Anthony, in this town, is a curiosity containing many beautiful petrifications.—Two battles were fought here on the 16th of August, 1777, when a signal victory was gained over the British by General Stark, at the head of 300 American militia.

[s] A large flourishing village, containing a bank, an academy, a printing-office, and 4 houses of public worship. The town is built principally on one street, which extends so far as almost to appear connected with Troy, three miles distant, there being a continuation of houses most of the way between the two places. Troy, Lansingburg, and Waterford, will probably in a few years, make but one town or city.

[a] Montpelier is 38 miles from the direct road to Montreal, on the north side of Union river, and nearly in the centre of the state. It is the capital of the state of Vermont, but is an inconsiderable village. The situation is in a valley, surrounded by hills, in a rich picturesque country. The township contains 2,000 inhabitants. Here is a state-house of wood, which is also used as a court house.

[b] Situated in the N. W. corner of Vermont, on Lake Champlain; it is a pleasant village, with about 2,000 inhabitants. Its trade is considerable, increased by the opening of the grand canal, by which produce has been sent from this place down to New-York city, about 400 miles distance.

[c] Marblehead, in Essex county, Massachusetts, a large, though not handsome town, containing about 6,000 inhabitants. Its public buildings are a bank, a custom-house, market-house, alms-house, an academy, and 5 houses of public worship. It has an excellent harbour, which lies in front of the town, a mile in length, and half a mile in width; it may be entered at all seasons. It is defended by Fort Sewell, which stands on a point near the entrance of the harbour, and is considered a very fine fortification, having 2 pieces mounted of 24, and ten 18 pounders. About 60 or 70 men are usually stationed here.

The business of this town consists mostly in coast and bank fisheries, giving employment to nearly 800 men. The total amount of shipping belonging to this port, is 12,300 tons.

[j] Capital of Worcester county, Massachusetts; it is pleasantly situated, and is a place of considerable wealth and trade. The first large quarto and folio bibles, ever published in America, were printed in this town. The town is built principally on one street, upwards of a mile in length; it is one of the most considerable inland towns in Massachusetts, containing a handsome court-house, and 3 houses of worship, and a number of well-built private dwellings. Population, 2,600.

[k] Leicester, Worcester county, contains a respectable academy, which was incorporated in 1784, and generally has about 100 students. The site of the building is elevated and healthy. In this town there is a large card manufactory, 3 meeting-houses, and rising 1,000 inhabitants.

[l] Northampton, capital of Hampshire county, Massachusetts, is beautifully situated on the W. side of Connecticut river, at which place there is a bridge across it, 1060 feet long. A fine stream runs through the town, on which are a number of mills and manufactories: at 2 woollen factories, nearly sixty yards of cloth are made daily. Within 8 miles of the town is a valuable lead mine, and in its vicinity are Mount Tom and Mount Holyoke, from which may be had a most delightful view of the surrounding country, including the largest and most fertile meadows that are to be found on the Connecticut. The population is between 2 and 3,000.

Hadley is connected with Northampton by the bridge above-mentioned; it is also connected with Hatfield by another bridge, and is a pleasant village, situated mostly on two wide streets, one of which is a mile long. This town is much noted for the culture of broom-corn, which, when manufactured, produces the amount of $20,000 annually. There is a respectable academy here, with upwards of 100 students.

The towns on this part of the river suffered great hardship in their early settlement, being constantly annoyed by the Indians, who openly attacked them several times, setting fire to their towns, and carrying off the inhabitants prisoners.

[m] New-Lebanon, Canaan, Columbia county, New-York. These springs have obtained considerable celebrity; it is a thermal water, of the temperature of 72° of Fahrenheit. The spring is kept in a state of ebullition by a constant emission of azotic gas, but is used without injury for any domestic purpose.

[p] The capital of Hampden county, Massachusetts, on the E. side of Connecticut river. It is a large pleasant town with a population of nearly 3,000.

It contains a court-house, a jail, a bank, a woollen manufactory, a rope-walk, a furnace, 2 paper-mills, 2 libraries, a printing-office, and 2 houses of public worship. A United States' armoury, situated about half a mile east of the village, has the appearance of a small town; a level square of 20 acres, is occupied with a number of dwelling-houses, store-houses, and workshops. One building is 204 feet by 32, of two stories, with a cupola, from which may be taken a most extensive and delightful view of Connecticut river and the surrounding country. Another is 100 by 40 feet, a third 60 by 32, all of brick, and 2 stories high. The second story of the last, is a large commodious hall, consecrated as a place of worship. There are water-works situated about a mile south of the arsenal, having 3 divisions—upper, middle, and lower, on Mill River, which flows into the Connecticut, where are the greatest collection of mills and other water-works in the state. There are about 250 workmen employed at this establishment. It is estimated that the cost of muskets at Springfield, is $13 56 each; at Harper's Ferry, $14 25.

[q] Roxbury, Norfolk county, Massachusetts, is a large and respectable town, consisting of three parishes, one of which appears a continuation of the city of Boston, with which it is connected by the isthmus called Boston Neck. The second parish comprises Jamaica Plain, a delightful village, in the vicinity of which is a pond which has never been fathomed. The population of the third parish, called Spring Street, is more diffused, having no village of consequence. Roxbury is an agricultural town, and sends large supplies of all kinds of fruit and vegetables to Boston market. Population nearly 4,000.

[r] Capital of Bristol county, Rhode-Island, on the continent. It has an excellent harbour and considerable trade ; the shipping of this port amounts to about 6,000 tons. The town contains a court-house, jail, market-house, a masonic hall, 4 banks, a library, an academy, 4 houses of worship, and between 2 and 3,000 inhabitants.

[s] A pleasant town, watered by the Neponset river, which separates it in part from Dorchester, and on which are a variety of mills. The compact part of the town is mostly elevated ;—from a part called Milton Hill, there is one of the most delightful views in America

[t] A large agricultural town, Norfolk county, Massachusetts, with a population of 1,300, containing a Congregational and Episcopal church. There are some manufactories here, but the town derives most note from being the residence of the Hon. John Adams, late President of the United States.

[u] Plymouth is the oldest town in New-England ; in the centre of the town is placed the rock on which the first settlers landed, the 22d December, 1620. The township contains more than 80 square miles ; in many parts the soil is barren and covered with pine forests. The village contains a court-house, bank, and 4 houses of worship. The harbour is large, but admits vessels drawing only 10 or 11 feet of water. The shipping belonging to this port amounts to about 18,000 tons, employed in the Fisheries, West India, and European trade. Population rising 4,000. Here are cotton, woollen, and other manufactories, and considerable iron works.

[j] Capital of Barnstable county, Massachusetts, on Barnstable Bay. This, like many other towns along this part of the coast, subsist principally by the fishing and coasting business.—The county of Barnstable comprises the whole of the peninsula of Cape Cod. The population of the town is between 3 and 4,000—that of the whole county, 22,000. The shipping owned here amounts to about 15,000 tons.

[k] Situated on both sides of the Blackstone, or Pawtucket river, which divides the State of Rhode-Island from Massachusetts. The first cotton factory erected in the United States was here; there are now a variety of manufactories at this place, and 2,000 inhabitants.

[l] Plymouth county, Massachusetts, containing 4,000 inhabitants. In the township are, a rolling and slitting mill, a shovel manufactory, 2 forges, 2 furnaces, 2 cotton manufactories, a town-house, an academy, and 8 houses of public worship.

[m] Kingston and Plympton, in Plymouth county, are both manufacturing towns, and have some trade in the fisheries.—Kingston has rising 1,000 inhabitants—Plympton about 900.

In Rhode-Island are a great number of well-settled towns, for the size of the State. Owing to the local situation, and the small territory it occupies, it has a more general character than any other state in the Union. The soil is generally better adapted to grazing than tillage; large numbers of cattle are raised here, and the produce of their dairies are said to be unrivalled in point of excellence. The rivers and bays furnish the largest quantities of all kinds of fish. The climate of this state is considered more salubrious than that of any other state in the Union, being remarkably temperate; having the advantage of a sea breeze in summer, and its moderating effect in winter.—There are seven academies in the state, and a respectable and flourishing college at Providence.

[r] Beautifully situated on an elevated bank, a small distance from the Connecticut river, and contains several large handsome dwelling houses. The principal occupation of the inhabitants is agriculture. At Bellows's Falls, in the same township, are several mills and a cotton manufactory. On the bridge which crosses the river at the latter place, may be had a fine view of the falls, the descent of which is about 50 feet.

[s] Hartford county, on the Connecticut; this town is well known for the cultivation of onions, the land around is luxuriant, and the country generally pleasant and healthy. The town comprises 3 parishes, 4 meeting-houses, and an academy. Population about 4,000.

[t] Capital of Windsor county, handsomely situated on the Waterqueechy; the village contains a court-house, jail, and church, and the town nearly 3,000 inhabitants.

[u] Orange county, Vermont, a valuable agricultural town watered by the branches of White River. The town contains a large bed of iron ore, iron works, and several mills. Population rising 2,000.

[v] Grafton county, New-Hampshire, on Glass Mountain; here are found large quantities of isinglass. Population about 1,000.

[d] Or Hurl Gate, a narrow strait of East River, formed by the projecting point of Long Island, nearly opposite to Harlem, 8 N. of New-York city. It was formerly considered a fearful pass, but steam boats now navigate it with ease and safety.—At certain times of the tide its whirlpools make a tremendous roaring.

[e] This is a kind of inland sea ; it is about 140 miles long, and from 3 to 25 broad, extending the whole length of the island, and dividing it from Connecticut. It communicates with the Atlantic at both ends.

[f] The largest and most beautiful river in New-England.—It rises on the northern border of New-Hampshire, separates New-Hampshire from Vermont, passes through Massachusetts and Connecticut, and after a southerly course of 410 miles, flows into Long Island Sound between Saybrook and Lyme. It is navigable for sloops drawing 8 feet of water, to Hartford, 50 miles, and by means of locks and canals, it has been rendered navigable for boats, to Fifteen Mile Falls, 250 miles above Hartford. There are falls and rapids on the river at several places, the most celebrated of which are Bellows's Falls, in Walpole, New-Hampshire, which are considered an interesting natural object. At South Hadley are other falls, where the river descends over a ledge of rocks, 30 feet in height, and about 100 yards in length. "When a spectator approaches the falls, he is presented with an object at once singular and beautiful; a sheet of water, spreading over an inclined plane of 230 feet, floating most elegantly in thousands of perpetually changing circular waves, and starred with an infinite multitude of small fluctuating spangles."

On the banks of this river are a great number of flourishing towns and villages, presenting a variety of beautiful landscapes.

[g] A pleasant and valuable town on the E. side of the Quinebaug, Windham county, Connecticut. It has a flourishing academy, and upwards of 2,000 inhabitants.

[t] Bergen county, opposite New-York state prison, which is $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles above the New-York city hall. The place is remarkable as being the real spot where the tragedy was acted which closed the valuable life of Hamilton.

[u] Post-town, and capital of Bergen county, built mostly of stone. It contains a court-house, academy, and 2 houses of worship. Population of the township is 3,000. It is situated on the Hackinsack river.

[v] In Rockland county, Orangetown, New-York, on S. part of Tappan Bay, which is an expansion of the Hudson river.—Tappan is a small village, principally inhabited by the descendants of the Low Dutch or Hollanders, as are a number of towns in the vicinity of New-York, on both sides of the Hudson. In this town, Major Andre, the British officer, suffered as a spy.

[w] A military post in Cornwall, Orange county, New-York, on W. bank of the Hudson, at its passage through the highlands. The Military Academy established here under the direction of the general government, has professors of natural philosophy, mathematics, and the art of engineering—and teachers of French, drawing, and the sword exercise—a surgeon, chaplain, and 248 cadets.

[x] A large, flourishing, and pleasantly situated village, on W. bank of the Hudson. Its trade is sufficient for the constant employment of 9 freighting vessels, from 90 to 120 tons, besides a number of smaller craft. Newburg contains a bank, an academy, a library, 4 houses of worship, and nearly 3,000 inhabitants. The courts for the county are held alternately here and at Goshen. The academy is a large building, containing about 100 students, and has a mathematical apparatus, and a library consisting of 6 or 700 volumes. There are upwards of 40 dry good stores in the place, besides a variety of others. On Chambers's Creek, in the W. part of the town, are 14 mills of various kinds. The surrounding country is very luxuriant.

[d] A beautiful lake of clear water, surrounded by high mountains covered with evergreens. It lies south of Lake Champlain, with which it communicates by an outlet. This outlet in its course to Lake Champlain, descends more than 100 feet. The delightful scenery in the vicinity of Lake George, makes it an object to travellers in quest of natural beauties.— It is well stored with various kinds of fish.

[e] A flourishing town containing about 1,000 inhabitants.— On the Racket River are falls which afford fine seats for mills and manufactories. A weekly newspaper is published here.

[f] A small thriving village, situated on both sides of Wood creek, at its entrance into Lake Champlain, and at the head of navigation on the Lake, 65 miles N. of Albany, 105 S. of St. John's. It has 4 churches, and 2,341 inhabitants. Here is a lock in the northern canal, which connects it with the above lake.

[g] Situated on both sides of the Otter creek, in Addison county, Vermont, at the head of navigation, 6 miles above Basin Harbour, at the mouth of the river. It was incorporated as a city several years ago, and is 1 mile square. It has a pleasant situation, and contains a number of mills and manufactories, and has considerable trade. Population, nearly 1,000.

[h] Handsomely situated on Lake Champlain, the ground gradually ascending from the water. This is the most commercial town in Vermont. The Vermont University, a large brick building, stands a little E. of the town, 1 mile distant from Lake Champlain, commanding an extensive and delightful view in every direction. This college was vacated during the last war, the effects of which suspension it has hardly yet recovered. At the falls on Union river, 1 mile distant, there is another village of about 36 houses, and a variety of mills and manufactories. Burlington contains a court-house, jail, academy, 2 churches, 160 dwelling-houses, 50 stores, offices, and shops, and 2,111 inhabitants.

[i] The last town in the United States in this direction; it is a pleasant village, and capital of Franklin county, on Lake Champlain, in the N. W. corner of Vermont, containing the county buildings, an academy, and a population of 1,636.

[j] A miserable old town in Canada, on the W. side of Champlain, 18 miles N. Lake Champlain, containing about 100 small dilapidating houses, mostly on one street. It has a custom-house, and was established in 1796 as the sole port of entry and clearance of all goods imported from the interior of the United States.

[k] Or Trois Rivières, Lower Canada, at the entrance of the St. Maurice into the St. Lawrence. It derives its name from the circumstance of 2 islands lying at the mouth of the St. Maurice, which cause 3 channels, having the appearance of 3 rivers. It is considered the third town in Lower Canada, and was formerly the capital of the French Government. It is now of but little consequence, containing the Ursuline convent, the Protestant and Catholic churches, the court-house, jail, and barracks, and 2,500 inhabitants.

[l] Or North river, N. Y. rises in a mountainous country west of Lake Champlain, in the counties of Essex and Montgomery, about Lat. 44 N. and communicates with the ocean below New-York city. It runs almost in a straight course S. for 200 miles. The largest ships are navigated as far as Hudson, steam boats to Albany, and sloops to Troy, the head of tide water. The banks of the Hudson present a beautiful picturesque scenery, and a number of flourishing towns.

[m] The township of Schenectady has a population of about 6,000. The city is situated on S. E. side of the Mohawk, across which at this place there is a fine bridge of 997 feet in length. This city is regularly laid out, and contains 4 houses of worship, a bank, an academy for young ladies, and a college. A little east of the city, in a commanding situation, are the buildings of Union Collge, a respectable and flourishing institution.

[n] Utica is situated on the south bank of Mohawk river, an enterprising thriving village. Since the northern canal has gone into operation, this place has rapidly increased in business and population. It is a place of much wealth, and situated in a fertile part of the state. It contains a court-house, 3 banks, an insurance office, and 5 houses of worship, besides many manufacturing and commercial establishments. Population rising 2,000; 3 weekly newspapers are published here.

[o] A large town, consisting of two villages, Onondaga Hollow and West Hill. At West Hill, which is 2 miles distant from the other part of the town, are a court-house, printing-office, and jail. Onondaga Hollow contains a state arsenal, an academy, a meeting-house, printing-office, and considerable manufactures. 200 Indians of the Onondaga tribe live 3 miles South of this village. A number of the same tribe reside on Buffalo Creek, the Alleghany, and on the Ouse, in Upper Canada.

[p] A delightful village, situated at the N. end of Owasco Lake; it has a court-house, a bank, and several mills and manufactories, 284 dwelling houses, and 2,025 inhabitants. Here is a large states prison, 3 stories high, and 276 feet in length. Three newspapers are published at Auburn.

[q] Situated at the outlet of Canandaigua Lake; is a place of considerable trade. It has an academy, Branch Bank of Utica, a state arsenal, and 3 houses of worship. The soil around is highly fertile and luxuriant. Population, between 2 and 3,000.

[r] A place of some note during the last war, when it was burnt by the British; it has since been rebuilt, and is now a handsome town of considerable business, containing a court-house, bank, and jail. Population 1,100. It is a port of entry, and capital of Niagara co. bounded on the west, by Lake Erie and the Niagara. This town being situated on the great line of communication between the eastern and western country, seems destined to be a place of wealth and importance; the harbour of Buffalo is 2 miles down the river at Black Rock.

[s] A pleasant flourishing town, situated on the Erie Canal, 13 miles W.N.W. from Utica, and 108 W.N.W. from Albany. It is the semi-capital of Oneida county, has considerable trade, and a population of 3,569.

[t] Capital of Oswego co. New-York, at the mouth of the Oswego, 114 miles W. of Utica. A flourishing village, and a place of considerable commerce, mostly in salt; large quantities of which are brought here from the salt works, at Liverpool and Selina, and exported. Population, 1000.

[v] Plattsburg, the capital of Clinton co. New-York, is on west side of Lake Champlain, at the mouth of the Saranac, on which river are the United States' barracks, 4 miles above the village. This town derives some consequence from being the place where, in the last war, 2,500 Americans effectually resisted a British force of 14,000 men; and in a bay before this town, Commodore M'Donough gained a complete victory over the British fleet. Plattsburg contains a court-house, a jail, a presbyterian church, an academy, a bank, and printing office, and upwards of 3,000 inhabitants.

[a] The cataract of Niagara is esteemed the grandest object of the kind in the world. The distance of the falls above lake Ontario is 14 miles, and below lake Erie 23 miles on the American side, 21 on the Canada side. At the distance of 1 3-4 m. above the falls the river begins to descend with a rapid and powerful current. At the falls it turns with a right angle to the NE., and is suddenly contracted in width from 3 miles to 3 4ths of a mile. Below the falls the river is only about 1-2 m. wide, but its depth is said to exceed 300 feet. The precipice over which the cataract descends, is formed by the brow of a vast bed of lime stone: and the perpendicular descent, according to major Prescott's survey, is 151 feet. The descent is perpendicular, except that the rocks are hollowed underneath the surface, particularly on the western side. The cataract is divided into two parts by Goat or Iris Island, which occupies about one 5th or 6th of the whole breadth. The principal channel is on the western side, and is called the Horse-shoe fall from its shape. The eastern channel is divided by another little island. The descent on the eastern side is greater by a few feet than on the other, but the water is more shallow. The noise of these falls is frequently heard at York, 50 miles distant, and the cloud of vapour thrown is seen 70 miles. The descent within 10 miles is about 300 feet, and from Lake Erie to Lake Ontario 329 feet. The quantity of water discharged in an hour, is computed, by Dr. Dwight, at 102,093,750 tons. The spray which rises from the water, serves as a medium for forming by the sun's rays the most brilliant rainbows.

[c] Town in Lower Canada, the second in rank in the province, in a district of the same name, 180 miles above Quebec, 200 below Lake Ontario, 243 N. Albany, 300 N. by W. Boston. Lon. 73. 35. W. Lat. 45. 31. N. Pop. in 1809, estimated at 16,000 ; in 1821, 18,767. H. 2,274 It is situated on S. side of the island of Montreal, in the St. Lawrence, at the head of ship navigation. The harbour, though not large, is always secure for shipping during the time the navigation of the river is open, and vessels drawing 15 feet water can lie close to the shore. The general depth of water is from 3 to 4 1-2 fathoms. The greatest inconvenience is the rapid of St. Mary, about a mile below, whose current is so powerful that without a strong N. E. wind, vessels cannot stem it.

Montreal is divided into Upper and Lower towns, one, however, is but little elevated above the other. The streets are for the most part laid out in a regular manner ; generally rather narrow ; but the new ones are of convenient width. The houses are mostly built of greyish stone, with the roofs covered with sheet iron or tin ; many of them large, handsome, and in a modern style ; seldom of more than 2 stories. The streets have a dull uniformity, and the city has heretofore been described by travellers as of an extremely heavy and gloomy appearance, but has of late been much improved, and may now be styled tolerably handsome.

The principle public buildings are the general hospital, the Hotel Dieu, the convent of Notre Dame, the French cathedral, the English church, the old monastery of Franciscans converted into barracks, the college, the seminary, the court house, the Government house, bank, &c. Montreal is the grand depot of the greatest company of N. America, who carry on the fur trade, and whose concerns are of vast extent and importance. It is also the channel through which the commerce is carried on between Canada and the U.S.—A canal from Montreal to La Chine was commenced in 1821. The district of Montreal is divided into 10 counties.

[d] Post town, Chatauque co. New-York, on Lake Erie, 7 miles from the head of Casada Lake. 353 W. Albany, W. 409. It affords the only harbour on the lake between Buffalo and Erie. Wharfs have been constructed here. From the head of Casada lake there is a free navigation to Pittsburg.

It is finely situated, regularly laid out in a square $\frac{3}{4}$ mile on each side, with spacious streets, having an elevation of about 40 feet above the river, of which it commands beautiful views. It contains a council house, a penitentiary, a market house, a bank, an academy, an arsenal, a government store house, a magnificent Catholic church of stone, a Presbyterian church, a lyceum, a bible society, and several other associations. The town is defended by fort Shelby; and the barracks adjoining are capable of quartering several regiments. In 1819, there were 142 dwelling houses, and 131 stores, public buildings, &c. Several of the buildings are of brick and stone, but they are mostly of wood and painted, and there is a general appearance of taste and neatness. It is advantageously situated, and has a considerable and growing commerce, and is a place of importance in the fur trade. It has 12 attorneys and 8 physicians. It was wholly destroyed by fire in 1805, but the streets have been since laid out regular and wide, and the town built in an improved style. The shipping belonging to this port in 1818, amounted to 849 tons; the value of exports \$ 69,330; imports \$ 15,611.—Detroit was settled by the French from Canada as early as 1683.—In 1818–19 the average temperature at Detroit was for Nov. 43 deg. Dec. 25 deg. Jan. 30 deg. Feb. 33 deg.; in Albany, N. Y. the same year, Jan. 22 deg. Feb. 29 deg.

[h] Meadville, post-town. & cap. Crawford co. Pa., on French Creek ; 25 W. Franklin, 37 S. Erie, W. 312. Lon. 80. 11. W. Lat. 41. 37. N. Pop. 649. It is very pleasantly situated, regularly laid out, and contains a court house, a bank, an arsenal, a printing office, a social library, an academy, a college, and a Presbyterian meeting house. It is a flourishing town, connected with Erie, Pittsburg, and Philadelphia, by turnpikes.

[i] Pittsburg, city, & cap. Alleghany co. Pa. ; 230 WNW. Baltimore, 297 W. by N. Philadelphia, W. 225. Lon. 80. 8W. Lat. 40 32. N. Pop. in 1810, 4,768 ; in 1820, 7,248.

It is situated on a beautiful plain, on a broad point of land, where the confluence of the Alleghany and Monongahela forms the Ohio. This place was once in the hands of the French and then called Fort du Quesne, afterwards Fort Pitt, and was commenced as a town under the name of Pittsburg in 1760. It is a very flourishing manufacturing and commercial town, and has an extensive trade. It contains a court house, a jail, a national armoury and magazine, an academy, a library of about 2,000 volumes, 4 banks, including a branch of the United States bank, and 8 houses of public worship. The plat of ground on which the town is built, is nearly in the form of a triangle, and is now almost filled with houses. A suburb has been laid out on the Alleghany, called the northern liberties, and another on the Monongahela. There are 4 other villages which are virtually suburbs of Pittsburg, Birmingham on the left bank of the Monongahela ; Alleghany upon the second bank of Alleghany river, opposite to the city ; Lawrenceville 2 miles above Pittsburg on the Alleghany ; and a street running along the left bank of the Monongahela, opposite to Pittsburg.

Pittsburg is a place of great domestic and foreign commerce. The wagons that have passed to and from the town, counted at the nearest turnpike gate, have amounted, in one year, to 11,800. The surrounding country is one great bed of fossil coal, & the hills in sight of the town are full of that mineral. The region also abounds in iron ore, and various mineral and vegetable productions. In 1816, there were in this town and its connected vicinity, 8 steam mills, 5 green and white glass houses, in which every kind of glass, from a porter bottle or window glass, to very elegant cut crystal glass, is manufactured ; 4 air furnaces, 3 breweries, in which are made immense quantities of beer, porter, and ale ; 67 flour mills, and numerous other mills and manufactories. With regard to manufactures, Pittsburg is the first town in the western country.

Travellers are almost always disappointed on entering this city ; there is but one point of approach which affords a good view of the place ; that is the summit of a hill in the road from Washington, Pa. Except from the gratifying reflection excited from the appearance of so much industry, Pittsburg is by no means a pleasant place to a stranger. The constant volumes of smoke fill the atmosphere with coal dust, and the whole town has a smoky appearance. The houses are mostly of brick, and generally large. The streets intersect each other at right angles, but are narrow. In Oct. 1815, it was calculated that 2,000 bushels of coal were consumed daily on a space 2 1-4 miles square. Three newspapers are published here. [m] Princeton, post-town, New-Jersey, partly in Middlesex and partly in Somerset co.; 10 NE. Trenton, 16 SW. New-Brunswick, 40 NE. Philadelphia, 49 SW. New-York, W. 178. Lon. 74. 35.W. Lat. 40. 22. N. It is a pleasant town, and contains a college, a theological seminary, a brick Presbyterian church, and upwards of 100 dwelling houses.

The college at this place was founded in 1746 at Elizabeth-town; the next year it was removed to Newark, and a Royal charter was granted to it in 1748, by the title of the College of New-Jersey, which is its corporate name at present. It remained at Newark 10 years, and in 1757, was permanently established at Princeton. Its situation is pleasant and peculiarly healthful, and it has long been one of the most respectable and flourishing seminaries in the United States. The college edifice, is styled Nassau Hall, and is 175 feet by 50, of 4 stories, containing a chapel about 40 feet square, and 60 rooms for students. Besides the principal edifice there are two other buildings, each about 60 feet by 30, containing the library, philosophical apparatus, museum, refectory, recitation rooms &c. These buildings are all of stone. A president's house and 2 professors' houses belong to the institution. The college has an excellent library of 7, or 8,000 volumes, a large and well selected philosophical apparatus, the orrery constructed by Dr. D. Rittenhouse, and a valuable cabinet of Mineralogy and natural history.

The board of trustees consists of 23 members, one half clergymen, the other half laymen. The Governor of the state is, ex officio, president of the board. The executive government is composed of a president, who is also a teacher of theology and moral philosophy; a vice president, who is also a professor of languages and belles lettres; a professor of mathematics and natural philosophy; a professor of chemistry, experimental philosophy, and natural history; and 3 tutors. The number of students, in 1820, was 121. The commencement is held on the last Wednesday in September. There are two vacations; the 1st from commencement, 6 weeks; the 2d from the 1st Thursday, after the 2d Tuesday in April, 4 weeks.

The Theological Seminary was established at this place in 1812, by the general assembly of the Presbyterian church in the U. States, and has two professors, one of didactic and polemic theology, and one of ecclesiastical history and church government, and an assistant professor. Partial provision is made for a professor of oriental and biblical literature. The building belonging to the seminary is an elegant stone edifice, 150 feet by 50, of 4 stories, and calculated to accommodate 100 students, and contains also several rooms for public purposes. By this measure the library of the seminary lately in the city of New York, consisting of 4,000 volumes, has been added to the library of that at Princeton, increasing it to upwards of 6,000 volumes. The number of students in 1822, was about 80; the whole number who had been members, including the 80, 235. A residence of 3 years is necessary, in order to pass through a complete course of theological instruction in this seminary. Candidates for admission are required to produce testimonials of good natural talents, and good moral and religious character, of being a member in good standing of some regular church, and of having passed through a regular course of academical study. Tuition and the use of the library are afforded free of expense to every student, and there are charitable funds for aiding the indigent.

[u] Capital of Gloucester co. New-Jersey, settled principally by quakers. It contains a court-house, jail, academy, and about a hundred houses.

[v] Capital of Salem co. New-Jersey, on Salem creek, $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles from Delaware bay. It is a place of considerable business. Agriculture is well attended to in this county, and having the advantage of water carriage, the inhabitants send large quantities of vegetables to Philadelphia and Delaware markets. Salem contains a court-house, a jail, a market house, an academy, and 4 houses of public worship. There are about 200 houses, mostly of brick.

[w] Capital of Cumberland co. New-Jersey, on the Cohazy, which is navigable to the town for vessels of 100 tons. The shipping belonging to this port amounts to about 14,000 tons. The town contains the county buildings, an academy, and printing office.

[x] Cumberland co. New-Jersey, on a branch of Maurice river, which runs into Delaware bay. It is navigable 20 miles. The town contains about 2,000 inhabitants.

[a] Capital of Newcastle co. Delaware, on W. bank of the river Delaware. It contains a court-house, a jail, an academy, and 2 houses of worship. Newcastle is a pleasantly situated village, and has some trade. It is a great thoroughfare for the steam boat and stage line from Baltimore to Philadelphia.

[b] Sussex co. Delaware, on Lewis Creek, 3 miles from its entrance into the Delaware Bay. This place was formerly the seat of justice for the county, but is now rather on the decline. It has a pleasant elevated situation, and is esteemed the most healthy place in this part of the state. Here are extensive and curious salt works for making salt by the sun.

[c] Indian river, Sussex co. Delaware, is 15 miles long, and runs into Rehoboth bay. It is navigable 13 miles.

[d] Capital and port of entry of Worcester co. Maryland, pleasantly situated on the Pocomoke, 25 miles from its mouth; the shipping belonging to this port is about 2,000 tons. The town contains the county buildings, an academy, bank, and 3 places of worship. The Pocomoke is 40 miles long, and runs S. W. into the Chesapeake bay, forming a considerable bay at its mouth.

[e] A small dull village, the capital of Accomac co. Virginia, containing the county buildings and about 30 houses.

[f] Northampton co. including Cape Charles, Eastern Shore of Virginia. It is the first county on the peninsula which extends along N. between the Atlantic and Chesapeake bay. It contains about 7,000 inhabitants, of whom one half are slaves. The whole of this peninsula, called Eastern Shore of Virginia, has a flat poor sandy soil. The average width of two counties, N. Hampton and Accomac is 10 miles. Produce, peach brandy and Indian corn.

[g] One of the largest bays on the globe. It is 12 miles wide at its entrance, between Cape Charles and Cape Henry, and extends 270 miles to the northward, dividing Virginia and Maryland. It is from 7 to 20 miles broad, and generally as much as 9 fathoms deep. It receives the waters of the Susquehanna, Potomack, Rappahannock, York, James, and several other smaller rivers.

[z] Harrisburg, post-town, Dauphin co. Pa., the seat of the state government, on NE. bank of the Susquehanna; 16 E. Carlisle, 36 WNW. Lancaster, 98 W. Philadelphia, W. 110. Lon. 76. 50. W. Lat. 40. 16. N. Pop. 2,990. It contains a large and elegant state house, a court-house, a jail, 2 market houses, a bank, and 3 houses of public worship, 1 for Lutherans, 1 for Presbyterians, and 1 for German Presbyterians. It is very pleasantly situated, regularly laid out, a great part of the houses are handsomely built of brick, and the town makes a very fine appearance. Here is a very elegant covered bridge across the Susquehanna.

[a] Susquehanna, the largest river of Pa., which is formed by the E. & W. branches. The E. rises in Otsego lake, NY., and the W. in Huntingdon co. Pa. They unite at Northumberland. The river then runs SE. into the head of the Chesapeake, in Md. It is $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile wide at its mouth, but is navigable only 5 miles. The Susquehanna was surveyed in 1817 by commissioners appointed by Pennsylvania, who reported, that below Columbia no ascending navigation was practicable, but that, at the expense of about \$20,000, every obstacle might be removed to the head of the two branches. A canal is in progress, which is to unite the waters of this river with those of the Schuylkill.

[b] Juniatta, navigable r. Pa., formed by three branches, which rise in the counties of Cambria, Bedford, and Huntingdon. It has an easterly course, and joins the Susquehanna, 11 m. above Harrisburg.

[c] Mifflin co. central part of Pa.; bounded N. by Centre and Northumberland counties, E. by the Susquehanna, which separates it from Dauphin co., S. by Cumberland co., and W. by Huntingdon co. It is watered by the Susquehanna and Juniatta. Pop. in 1810, 12,132; in 1820, 16,618. Chief town, Lewistown.

[g] Schuylkill River rises in Luzerne county, Pennsylvania, and runs SE. into the Delaware, 6 miles below Philadelphia. It is 140 miles in length, and navigable for boats 90. There are falls on the river, 5 miles above Philadelphia, and Swedes Falls, a little below Norristown. A canal unites the waters of the Schuylkill with those of the Susquehanna. The Tulpehocken, a navigable stream, flows into the Schuylkill 1 1-2 miles above Reading.

[h] City and capital of Lancaster county, Pennsylvania; 1 1-2 miles W. of the Conestoga Creek, which falls into the Susquehanna 9 miles SSW. of the city.—Lancaster is situated in one of the most fertile and highly cultivated counties in Pennsylvania. It has an extensive trade, and several manufactories. The city was settled originally by Germans, and its present inhabitants are mostly their descendants: English education, however, generally prevails. The public buildings are a court-house, jail, a market-house, poor-house, hospital, register's office, college, 2 banks, and 10 houses of worship.—There are 6 newspapers published here—3 in English, and 3 in German. Population, 6,633.

[i] The largest river in Pennsylvania, formed by the East and West Branches. The East rises in Otsego Lake, New-York, and the West in Huntingdon county, Pennsylvania; they unite at Northumberland. The river then runs SE. into the head of Chesapeake Bay, in Maryland. It is 1 1-4 miles wide at its mouth, but is navigable only 5 miles.

[j] Cumberland county, Pennsylvania; the town is built along one street nearly 2 miles. It has 3 places of worship, and about 1,200 inhabitants. It is situated on the Conedowiet Creek.

[d] Harper's Ferry, post-village, Jefferson co. Va., at the junction of the Shenandoah with the Potomac; 8 ENE. Charlestown, 30 NE. Winchester, 65 WNW. Washington. The celebrated passage of the Potomac, at this place, is an object truly grand and magnificent. The eye takes in at a glance, on the north side of the Potomac and Shenandoah at their junction, an impetuous torrent foaming and dashing over numerous rocks, which have tumbled from precipices that overhung them, the picturesque tops and sides of the mountains, the gentle and winding current of the river below the ridge, presenting altogether a landscape capable of awakening the most delightful and sublime emotions. "This scene," says Mr. Jefferson, "is worth a voyage across the Atlantic."—There is at this place, belonging to the United States, a very extensive establishment for the manufacture of arms. It was founded in 1793, and now employs about 260 workmen. There are 8 large brick buildings, 6 on the Potomac, and 2 on the Shenandoah, 2 miles distant, occupied by the works; also 2 large brick buildings occupied as an arsenal.

[g] Cumberland, post-town, and cap. Alleghany co. Md., on the Potomac, at the junction of Will's creek, 70 W. Hagerstown, 130 ESE. Wheeling, 150 W. by N. Baltimore, W. 135. It is a considerable town, and contains a court house, a jail, a market house, a bank, and 4 houses of public worship, 1 for Lutherans, 1 for Roman Catholics, 1 for Methodists, and 1 built jointly by the Presbyterians and Episcopalians. In and adjoining the town are 3 merchant flour mills, 2 of them only now in operation. Two newspapers are published here. The mountains in the vicinity abound in stone coal, great quantities of which are transported down the Potomac in flat and keel boats. The great western road, made by the U. S. government, extends from this town to the banks of the Ohio at Wheeling, and a survey has been made from thence to the Mississippi, 600 miles further.

[h] Brownsville, post-town, and borough Fayette co., Pa. on the Monongahela at the junction of Dunlap's and Red Stone creeks; 12 NW. Union, 25 SE. Washington, 32 SSE. Pittsburg, 55 ESE. Wheeling, 210 NW. Baltimore, W. 215. Pop 976; and including the borough of Bridgeport, separated only by Dunlap's creek, 1,600. It is situated at the point where the great Cumberland road strikes the head of navigation of the Monongahela; and has long been a place of embarkation for emigrants to the west. The town has a picturesque site, built on the declivity of a hill, and the most elevated houses being about 300 feet higher than those on the river. It contains a bank, a printing office, a masonic hall, and 4 houses of public worship for Presbyterians, Episcopalians, Quakers, and Methodists. The town is built principally of brick and stone. It is situated in a district of country abounding in coal and iron ore, and contains various manufacturing establishments for the manufacture of iron, glass, cotton, cards, nails, wire, flour, &c. Salt water also abounds in the vicinity.

[i] Wheeling, post-town, Ohio co. Va., on the Ohio; at the mouth of the Wheeling; 8 E. St Clairsville, 28 W. by S. Washington, Pa., 95 miles below Pittsburg, 130 WNW. Cumberland, 370 NW. Richmond, W. 270. It is built on a high bank, principally on one street, and contains a court-house, a jail, a market house, a bank, a church, about 200 houses, and has some trade and manufactures. The Cumberland road, lately opened, reaches the Ohio at this place.

[o] Monongahela river rises from the Laurel mountains in Va. and runs north into Pennsylvania, uniting with the Alleghany at Pittsburg, it forms the Ohio. It is navigable for batteaux to Brownsville, and farther still for lighter craft. Its length is 300 miles.

[p] Ohio river is formed by the Union of the Alleghany and Monongahela rivers at Pittsburg. It has a WSW. course of 949 miles, when it joins the Mississippi, 193 miles below the Missouri, in Lon. 80. 58. W. Lat. 37. N. By a direct line it is only 614 miles from Pittsburg. The river varies in breadth from 400 to 1400 yards.

At Cincinnati it is 534 yards wide, which is about its average breadth. It has considerable falls at Louisville. The descent being $22\frac{1}{2}$ feet in two miles. The river contains 100 islands.

The mean height of its current is estimated at 3 miles an hour, when very low, 2 miles. It has a great number of flourishing towns on its banks, which will be noticed.

Columbus, W. 277. Lon. 8. 40. W. Lat. 40 25. N. Pop. 2539. It is a very flourishing town, regularly laid out, and contained in 1817, 453 houses, 3 churches, an academy, 2 banks, a market house, a woollen manufactory, the machinery of which is put in motion by a steam engine, a steam paper mill, a flour mill and cotton manufactory driven by steam power, a printing office, from which is issued a weekly newspaper, an air foundry, 27 retail stores, and 16 public inns.

[x] Maysville, post-town, Mason co. Ken., on the Ohio; 3 NE. Washington, 60 NE. Lexington, 63 above Cincinnati, W. 483. Pop. in 1810, 335, in 1820, 1,130. It is a flourishing town, and contains a glass manufactory, a printing office, &c. It has more trade than any other town in Kentucky, on the Ohio, above Louisville. The site on which it is built is pleasant, but confined, not more than 50 rods wide, and the hills in its rear rise abruptly to the height of 450 feet.

[y] Ohio, i. e. in the Indian language, Beautiful river, r. U. S., formed by the Union of the Alleghany and Monongahela, at Pittsburg, Pa. It separates Virginia and Kentucky on the S. from the states of Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois, on the N. and after a WSW. course of 949 miles, joins the Mississippi. 193 miles below the Missouri, in Lon. 88. 58. W. Lat. 37 N. From Pittsburg to its mouth, by a direct line, it is only 614 miles. The river varies in breadth from 400 to 1400 yards. At Cincinnati it is 534 yards, which may be regarded its mean breadth. It is an excellent river for inland navigation. Its current is very gentle, and nowhere broken by any considerable falls, except at Louisville. The whole descent here, in 2 miles, is 22½ feet, but the current is not so broken but that boats have, in many instances, ascended the falls. A canal is contemplated around these falls

The annual range from high to low water is upwards of 50 feet, and its extreme range about 60 feet. When lowest, it may be forded in several places above Louisville. It is frozen over almost every winter near Pittsburg, and has been frozen about 400 miles below Pittsburg. The navigation is generally suspended 8 or 10 weeks, during the winter, by floating ice. Its current when at mean height, is estimated at 3 miles an hour, when very low 2 miles. The river contains 100 Islands, but there are none between the states of Ohio and Kentucky. Steam boats are now employed on this river with great advantage. The principal towns on the Ohio, below Pittsburg, are Steubenville, Wheeling, Marietta, Gallipolis, Maysville, Cincinnati, Madison, and Louisville.

[e] Shenandoah river rises in Augusta county, and, after a course of 200 miles, joins the Potomac, in latitude 38 degrees, just before the latter bursts through the Blue Ridge. It is composed of 4 branches, South, middle, and North Rivers, and the Shenandoah. It flows thro' a fertile part of Virginia, and is navigable for boats 100 miles.

[f] Staunton, capital of Augusta county, Va. has a beautiful and healthy situation, is regularly laid out, and contains 2 court-houses, an academy, 3 churches, and 1500 inhabitants; 12 miles from the town is a sulphur spring, much resorted to in the warm season.

[g] Patuxent river, Maryland, runs S.E. into the Chesapeake Bay, 18 miles north of the Potomac. It is navigable for vessels of 250 tons to Nottingham 50 miles.

[h] The Potomac river rises in two branches, north and south, near the Alleghany mountains, and forms the separating line between Maryland and Virginia thro' its whole course. It flows into the Chesapeake Bay, between Point Lookout and Smith's Point, where it is $7\frac{1}{2}$ miles wide. The termination of the tide water is 300 miles from the sea; and the river is navigable for ships of the greatest burden through nearly that distance.—There are several falls above tide water. Its length above the tide is upwards of 300 miles through an inhabited and for the most part fertile country.

[i] Rappahannock river rises in the Blue Ridge, and runs E. S. E. about 130 miles into the Chesapeake Bay, 25 miles S. of the Potomac. It is navigable for vessels under 140 tons to Fredericksburg, Va. 110 miles from its mouth.

[s] Capital of Elizabeth City county, Virginia, at the head of a bay which runs up north from the mouth of James river, called Hampton Road. It is a pleasant little town, containing about 50 houses; a steamboat passes twice every day from Norfolk to Hampton; the shipping of the latter port amounts to upwards of 2,000 tons.

[t] Or Yorktown, port of entry, and capital of York county, on S. side of York river; the Harbour here is one of the best in Virginia; the river is here contracted to the width of a mile and enclosed by high banks. The town has gone much to decay, but is famous as being the place where the Americans captured the British troops under Lord Cornwallis, October 19th, 1781

[u] Formerly the seat of government for the State of Virginia, in James city county, situated between two rivulets, one of which flows into York, and the others into James river. It is regularly laid out, and contain a State house, court-house, jail, hospital, college, and an Episcopal church. Most of the houses are in a dilapidated state, and the town generally in decay. The college of William and Mary was founded here in 1691, and endowed by King William with £2,000 and 20,000 acres of land, with additional revenue, from other sources, but the income is now greatly diminished. The College contains a library of 3,000 volumes, and a valuable philosophical apparatus.

[b] Roanoke river, is formed by the union of the Staunton and the Dan, the former of which rises in Virginia, and the latter N. Carolina, and flows into the Albemarle Sound. The river is navigable for vessels of considerable burden 30 or 40 miles, and for boats 70 miles to the Falls, and for those of only 5 tons, 200 miles above the falls. The Roanoke flows through the richest and most fertile part of N. Carolina.

[c] Capital of Washington county, N. Carolina, near the mouth of Roanoke river; the shipping belonging to this port amounts to about 1,500 tons.

[d] Capital of Edgecombe county, N. Carolina, on the river Tar, containing a bank, courthouse, and academy, and upwards of 600 inhabitants. This town is a depot for large quantities of country produce, beef, corn, tobacco, &c. which is brought here for exportation.

[e] A flourishing town, and the capital of Craven county, N. Carolina, on W. bank of the Neuse, containing a courthouse, a jail, a theatre, a masonic hall, 2 banks, an academy, a public library, and 4 houses of worship, and 6000 inhabitants. This town is the largest in N. Carolina, handsomely built, and considered a healthy situation. It is a place of considerable commerce; the shipping owned here amounts to upwards of 4000 tons. An excellent steamboat plies between Newbern and Elizabeth city, connected with the stages from Charleston, S. Carolina, and with the stages and steam boats to the northward. By this line the route from Norfolk to Charleston is performed in 7 days, distance 800 miles.

[f] Fayetteville, post-town and cap. Cumberland co. N. C., on W. side of the NW. branch of Cape Fear river; 60 S. Raleigh, 95 NW. Wilmington, 119 ESE. Salisbury, 158 NE Columbia, 196 N. by E. Charleston, W. 348. Lon. 97. 6. W. Lat. 34. 2. N. Pop. in 1800, 1,656; in 1820, 3,532. It is the most commercial town in N. C., and has a pleasant and advantageous situation, nearly a mile from Cape Fear river.—The Cape Fear Company have lately cleared the river of logs and sand shoals, in order to render it navigable for steam boats; and have constructed a canal from the river through the town, so that boats may lie along by the side of the ware-houses. It contains a court house, a town house, an academy, a masonic hall, 3 banks, one of which is a branch of the U. S. bank, and 3 houses of public worship. Several of the public buildings are large and elegant. The town is regularly laid out, and the principal streets are 100 feet wide. Two weekly newspapers are published here. Great quantities of produce, consisting of cotton, tobacco, flour, wheat, flaxseed, corn, hemp, naval stores, &c. are collected here, and conveyed in boats down the river to Wilmington. The situation of the town is healthful, and favourable for trade and manufactures. The land around is considerably elevated, and the soil dry and barren, except on the water courses, where it is rich.

[g] Wilmington, capital of New-Hanover co., N. C., is situated on the E. side of Cape Fear river, just below the confluence of the N. E. and N. W. branches, about 35 miles from the sea. It is favourably situated for trade, but is accounted unhealthy. The town contains the county buildings, an academy, 2 banks, a printing office, and 3 places of worship. Population, about 2,000.

It is very pleasantly situated, and contains an elegant court house, a jail, and 100 to 150 houses. It is 1 mile from the Rivanna, and is laid out in squares of three or four acres. The University of Virginia was established here by the Legislature in 1817. The buildings comprise 10 pavilions for the accommodation of professors; 109 dormitories, and 6 hotels for the lodging and dieting of the students. The whole expense of the buildings is stated at $ 207,710. The site is a little distance out of the village, and occupies 200 acres. The institution is to receive annually from the Virginia literary fund the sum of $ 15,000.

[j] Warm Spring Mountains, or Jackson's Mountains, ridge of the Alleghany mountains, in Bath and Pendleton cos., Va. remarkable for warm springs. Warm Spring, in Bath co., issues in a very bold stream, sufficient to work a grist mill, and to keep its basin, which is 30 feet in diameter, at the vital warmth, viz. 96 deg. of Fahrenheit. The waters afford the finest natural bath known in America, and are useful for the rheumatism, and some other complaints. It rains here 4 or 5 days in a week. Here is a post office.

[k] Hot Springs, in Bath co. Va.; 7 SW. Warm Springs. The water at this spring has been so hot as to boil an egg. It raises the thermometer to 112 deg., and is useful in some complaints. Here is a post office; W. 130.

[l] Kenawha, or Kenhawa, r. Va., which has its sources in the western part of N. C., and flows through the western part of Virginia, in a north westerly direction, and joins the Ohio at Mount Pleasant, 87 miles below Marietta, and 265 below Pittsburg. It receives Green Brier river in the western part of Monroe co., and about 40 m. below the junction, it has a remarkable cataract, falling perpendicularly 50 feet. There are salt works on the river, a little above the town of Charlestown. The river is navigable most of the year.

[n] Lexington, post-town, and cap. Rockbridge co. Va., on N. branch of James river; 35 SSW. Staunton, 38 NNW. Lynchburg, 150 W. Richmond, W. 209. It has a handsome town, finely situated, and contains a court house, a jail, a female academy, a Presbyterian meeting house, a college, and upwards of 100 dwelling houses. Near the town is an arsenal belonging to the state of Virginia, containing 20,000 muskets for the use of the militia in the western part of the state. The surrounding country is fertile and well cultivated.

Washington college, at this place, was originally incorporated as an academy, in 1762, under the name of Liberty Hall Academy; and in 1813, it was erected into a college, called Washington college. from Gen. Washington, who presented to the institution 100 shares in the James river canal, amounting to $20,000. This stock for a number of years was unproductive, but since the late war, it has become very valuable, and by an arrangement with the legislature, in 1820, the stockholders are to receive 12 per cent. per annum. There are 2 college buildings of brick, 60 feet by 20, of 2 stories, a steward's house, and a refectory. In addition to these buildings, the trustees contemplate erecting a large college edifice. The college has a philosophical apparatus, and a library of about 2,000 volumes. The board of trustees consists of 20 members. The executive government is entrusted to a president, who is also professor of belles letters and mathematics, a professor of natural philosophy and astronomy, a professor of languages, and one tutor. The number of students is usually from 40 to 50. There is a grammar school connected with the college.

[s] Post-town, Pittsylvania co. Va., on the river Dan, 130 miles by water, and 116 by land above the great falls of the Roanoke, about 70 S. by W. Lynchburg, 150 SW. by W. Richmond, W. 291. Lon. 79. 25. W. Lat. 36. 34. N. Pop. in 1818, about 500. It contained, in 1818, an academy, a printing office, 3 warehouses for the inspection of tobacco, a flour inspection, 3 saw mills, a manufacturing mill, and some others, most of them very recently erected. It is situated at the falls of the Dan, on a wide and beautiful plain, rising gradually from the river to a high eminence, which commands an extensive and picturesque prospect, embracing a view of the falls, the gentle current of the river below, and the verdant hills and cultivated fields of the surrounding country. The improvements projected a few years since in the navigation of the Dan above this place, and at the falls of the Roanoke, opening a direct water communication with Norfolk, gave a sudden start to the prosperity of Danville. The Roanoke Navigation Company have constructed a canal which locks around the falls, with a basin formed in the centre of the town, safe and convenient for the batteaux navigation of the river. Danville is becoming the upland depot of an extensive commerce, embracing not only the adjacent fertile districts of Virginia and North Carolina, but also a great part of East Tennessee. The articles of commerce consist of wheat, flour, tobacco, cotton, whiskey, brandy, Indian corn, beef, pork, butter, poultry, lumber, and iron. Batteaux carrying from 8 to 12 hogsheads of tobacco, and from 30 to 40 barrels of flour, have a convenient navigation from this place to the falls of the Roanoke.

[b] Roanoke, r. N. C. which is formed by the Union of the Staunton and the Dan, the former of which rises in Virginia, and the latter in N. C., and flows into Albemarle sound, Lon. 76. 56. W. Lat. 35. 58. N. It is navigable for vessels of considerable burden 30 or 40 miles, and for boats of 30 or 40 tons to the falls, 70 miles, and for boats of 5 tons for the distance of 200 miles above the falls.

The country watered by this river is extremely fertile. Below the falls towards the mouth, vast quantities of Indian corn are raised; and the planters are among the wealthiest in the state. Improvements have lately been made in the navigation of this river by constructing canals around the falls; opening a water communication between Norfolk, Va., and the interior of N. C., and the southern part of Virginia.

[c] Abingdon, post-town, and cap. Washington co, Va.; 320 WSW. Richmond. W. 404. Lat. 36. 37. N. It has a court-house, market-house, Presbyterian church, and a jail. Here is a remarkable cave.

[d] Clinch river, Tennessee, which rises in Va., and runs SW. into the Tennessee, at Kingston. It is 150 yards wide at its mouth, and navigable for boats 200 miles.

[p] Marietta, post-town and capital, Washington co. Ohio, on the Ohio, 178 miles by water, below Pittsburg, 287 above Cincinnati, 93 E. by N. Chillicothe, 109 SE. Columbus, W. 367. Long. 81 19 W. Lat. 39 25 N. It is pleasantly situated, immediately above the mouth of the Muskingum, and contains a court house, a jail, a market house, a bank, an academy, a land office, a printing office, 2 houses of public worship, about 20 stores, and 90 dwelling houses. A considerable part of this town experiences the inconvenience of being almost annually overflowed by water.—Pop. of the township 2,136.—About 1-2 m. from the junction of the Muskingum with the Ohio, are remains of extensive ancient works, consisting of walls and mounds of earth, in direct lines, and also in square and circular forms. The largest square fort contains 40 acres, and is inclosed by a wall of earth, from 6 to 8 feet high, and from 25 to 36 wide, at the base. One of the mounds in the form of a sugar loaf, has a regular base, 115 feet in diameter, and is 30 feet in perpendicular height.

[q] Fredericksburg, post-town, Spotsylvania co. Va., on SW. side of the Rappahannock; 70 miles above Tappahannoc, 68 N. Richmond, W. 58. Lon. 77. 38. W. Lat. 38. 34. N. Pop. in 1812, 2,550, and in 1817, 3,255. It is pleasantly situated, regularly laid out, and is one of the most healthy, flourishing, and commercial towns in the state. It contains a court-house, a jail, a spacious town house, a market house, a masonic hall, a Lancasterian school, a tobacco warehouse, two banks, and 4 houses of public worship, 1 for Episcopalians, 1 for Presbyterians, one for Baptists, and one for Methodists. Nearly one hundred of the houses are of brick. It is the seat of the superior court of law and of chancery for the district. This town exports large quantities of corn and flour, and considerable quantities of tobacco, flaxseed, pease, and beans. The annual amount of exports is about $4,000,000. On the waters of the Rappahannoc within two miles of the town, there are 8 flour mills. The river is navigable as far as this place for vessels of 130 or 140 tons, having 9½ feet of water. The shipping of this town is entered at the port of Tappahannoc. Much of the surrounding country is fertile, well cultivated, and contains many fine plantations.

[d] Halifax, post-town, and cap. Halifax co. N. C., on the Roanoke; 8 miles below the falls, 75 WNW. Edenton, 75 S. Petersburg, 30 NE. Raleigh, W. 220. It contains a court house, a jail, a bank, and a meeting house. It is situated in a very fertile country, and is a place of some trade. In the county of Halifax, 13 SW. of this town, there is an academy.

[e] Wilmington, post-town, port of entry, and cap. New Hanover co. N. C., on the E. side of Cape Fear river, just below the confluence of the NE. and NW. branches, about 35 m. from the sea; 90 SE. Fayetteville, 93 SSW. Newbern, W. 433. Lon. 78. 10. W. Lat. 34. 11. N. Pop. 2,633; blacks, 1,535. It contains a court house, a jail, an academy, 2 banks, a printing office, an Episcopal, and a Presbyterian church.—The exports from this town, in 1816, amounted to $1,061,112. The exports of the whole state amounted only to $1,328,771. The shipping owned here, in 1816, amounted to 8,952 tons. It is well situated for trade, but is accounted unhealthy. The harbour admits vessels of 300 tons, but the entrance is rendered dangerous and difficult by a large shoal. Opposite to the town are 2 islands which extend with the course of the river, dividing it into 3 channels. They afford the finest rice fields in the state. On the 4th November, 1819, about 200 buildings were consumed here by fire, the damage was estimated at about $1,000,000.

[f] Salisbury, post-town and cap. Rowan co., N. C.; 5 SW. of the Yadkin, 34 SW. Salem, 119 WNW. Fayetteville, W. 375. Pop. about 600. It contains a court house, a jail, a bank, an academy, and a church. It is a flourishing town, and is situated in a very fertile country. Near this town there is a remarkable wall of stone, laid in cement, plastered on both sides, from 12 to 14 feet in height, and 22 inches thick. The length of what has been discovered is about 300 feet. The top of the wall approaches within one foot of the surface of the ground. When built, by whom, and for what purpose, is unknown. A similar wall has, within a few years, been discovered, about 6 miles from the first, from 4 to 5 feet high, and 7 inches thick.

Charleston, W. 348. Lon. 97. 6. W. Lat. 34. 2. N. Pop. in 1800, 1,656; in 1820, 3,532. It is the most commercial town in N. C., and has a pleasant and advantageous situation, nearly a mile from Cape Fear river.—The Cape Fear Company have lately cleared the river of logs and sand shoals, in order to render it navigable for steam boats; and have constructed a canal from the river through the town, so that boats may lie along by the side of the ware-houses. It contains a court house, a town house, an academy, a masonic hall, 3 banks, one of which is a branch of the U. S. bank, and 3 houses of public worship. Several of the public buildings are large and elegant. The town is regularly laid out, and the principal streets are 100 feet wide. Two weekly newspapers are published here. Great quantities of produce, consisting of cotton, tobacco, flour, wheat, flaxseed, corn, hemp, naval stores, &c. are collected here, and conveyed in boats down the river to Wilmington. The situation of the town is healthful, and favourable for trade and manufactures. The land around is considerably elevated, and the soil dry and barren, except on the water courses, where it is rich.

[k] Yadkin, r. N. C., which rises between the Alleghany and Brushy mountains, passes through the counties of Wilkes, Surry, Rowan, Montgomery, and Anson, and flows into S. C., with the name of the Great Pedee. In Montgomery co. it passes over narrows occasioned by mountains on each side, which contract it from 200 yards wide to about 30. A few miles below the narrows it receives Rocky river, and then takes the name of Great Pedee. The whole descent of the river from Abbott's creek to Mountain creek, just below the Narrows, a distance of 24 miles, is 321 feet. This river was surveyed in

[o] Orangeburg, post-town and cap. Orangeburg district, S. C., on N. branch of the Edisto; 40 SSW. Columbio, 77 NNW. Charleston, W. 548. It contains a court house, a jail, about 20 houses, and an academy.

[p] Granby, post-town, Lexington district, S. C., on the Congaree, opposite Columbia, W 509.

[q] Columbia, post-town and cap. S. C., in Richland district; 35 SW. Camden, 73 NE. Augusta, 120 NNW. Charleston, W. 507. Lon 81. 7. W. Lat. 33. 57. N. Pop. in 1816, 2,058, of whom 1,031 were whites. It is situated opposite to the confluence of the Saluda and Broad rivers, which unite to form the Congaree. From the river there is a gradual ascent for one mile; then commences a plain of between 2 and 3 miles in extent, gradually descending on every side. This elevated plain forms the site of the town, which presents a handsome and extensive prospect. The town was formed in 1787. It is regularly laid out. The streets intersect each other at right angles, and are 100 feet wide.

Columbia is a flourishing town, and contains a state house, a court house, a jail, a market house, a branch of the state bank of S. C., an academy for males, and one for females, a college, and 4 houses of public worship; 1 for Episcopalians, 1 for Presbyterians, 1 for Baptists, and 1 for Methodists. The state house is of 2 stories, 170 feet by 60; and is situated in the central part of the town. The Presbyterian church is an elegant edifice, presenting in its front two lofty spires: and the Episcopal church has a bell and an organ. The houses display much taste and elegance. They are mostly of wood; but the taste for building with brick is now predominating. A steam boat plies between this town and Charleston.

The South Carolina College was founded in this town in 1802, but the first graduation did not take place till 1807. It is under the liberal patronage of the state legislature, from which it receives an annual grant of 10, or 12,000 dollars. The college buildings are two edifices, of 3 stories, about 210 feet long, and 25 wide, containing a chapel, recitation rooms, and rooms for the accommodation of students. These buildings stand opposite to each other; at the head of the opening between them, stands the president's house, a large building. In a range below on one side are two large tenements for two professors, and a steward's house; on the other side are two similar tenements for professors, and a large building containing the philosophical apparatus, and library, with an observatory upon its summit. These buildings are all of brick, and regularly arranged, and make an impressive appearance. The library contains about 5,000 volumes. The chemical apparatus and the philosophical are both extensive, and cost upwards of 7,000 dollars:

The board of trustees is composed of the governor, lieutenant governor, president of the senate, speaker of the house of representatives, the judges of the state, together with 13 members elected by the legislature every 4 years. The executive government is entrusted to a president, 4 professors, 1 of languages, 1 of moral philosophy and logic, 1 of chemical and experimental philosophy and mineralogy, and 1 of mathematics, mechanical philosophy, and astronomy; and 2 tutors. The number of students, in 1818, was upwards of 100. There is but one session in a year, which continues 9 months, and one vacation of 3 months, commencing about the 1st of July. The commencement is held on the 1st Monday in December, during the sitting of the legislature.

Buildings in 1819, 1,890; 432 of brick, 1,458 of wood; dwelling houses, 1,304.

The city is divided into 4 wards, regularly laid out, and well built, and its situation is pleasant, healthy, and considerably elevated. It contains a court-house, 3 brick market-houses, 4 banks, a Lancasterian school, a public library of 1,400 volumes, a medical college, instituted in 1820, 10 places of public worship, a hospital, a museum, 4 printing offices, a steam mill, 87 feet by 62, of 9 stories, 1 wooling and 4 cotton manufactories, 2 glass houses, a sugar refinery, 2 breweries, a type foundry, an air and brass foundry, also the building of the Cincinnati Manufacturing Company, which is 150 feet by 37, of 4 stories, besides other manufacturing establishments. The funds of the Lancasterian Seminary have lately been increased by a subscription of $30,000, with a view of erecting it into a college. Mathematics, natural philosophy, chemistry, and the learned languages, are now taught here.

Cincinnati was first laid out in 1788, and began to flourish after 1794, since which time its growth in population, wealth, and trade, has been exceedingly rapid, and it is now the largest town in the Western country above New Orleans.

[y] Cambahee, r. S. C., which is formed by two branches, called North and South Saltketcher, and runs into St. Helena sound.

Pop. in 1810, 2,476; in 1820, upwards of 4,000. It contains a court house, a jail, a market-house, an academy, an insurance office, 3 banks, one of which is a branch of the U. S. bank, and 4 houses of public worship; 1 for Presbyterians, 1 for Roman Catholics, 1 for Methodists, and 1 for Episcopalians. It is regularly laid out and handsomely built, mostly of brick. Several of the public buildings, and many of the private houses, are spacious and elegant. It is a very flourishing commercial town, and probably has more trade than any other place of its size in the United States. Immense quantities of cotton, considerable tobacco, and some other kinds of produce are brought to Augusta from the back country, and conveyed in boats down the river to Savannah.

[g] Savannah, city and port of entry, Chatham co. Georgia, on SW. bank of the Savannah, 17 m. from its mouth ; 118 SW. Charleston, 123 SE. Augusta, 160 ESE. Milledgeville, W. 658. Lon. 81. 10. W. Lat. 32. 8. N. Pop., 1820, 7,523; slaves, 3,175; free blacks, 582. Situated on a sandy plain, elevated about 40 feet above low tide, and contains a court-house, a jail, an alms-house, a hospital, a theatre, a public library, an academy, an exchange, 3 banks, including a branch of the U. S. bank : and 7 houses of public worship, 1 for Presbyterians, 1 for Episcopalians, 1 for Lutherans, 1 for Methodists, 1 for Baptists, 1 for Roman Catholics, & a Jewish synagouge.

The academy is built of brick and stone, 180 feet by 60, of 3 stories. The exchange is a brick edifice of 5 stories. The new Presbyterian church, recently erected, is a very spacious and elegant edifice of stone. The city a few years since was almost wholly built of wood, with very few elegant houses, but a large proportion of the houses recently erected, are handsomely built of brick. Savannah has heretofore been accounted very unhealthy during the summer and autumn, but the salubrity of the place is now much improved by appropriating to a dry culture, those lands in its immediate vicinity, which were formerly appropriated to the culture of rice.

The city is regularly laid out, and contains 10 public squares, each consisting of 2 acres, with a pump in the centre. The squares and public walks are planted with china trees, which contribute much to the ornament, comfort, and salubrity of the place. Savannah is the great emporium of the state, and is a place of much trade. In 9 months, ending June 30, 1817, there were exported 107,320 bales of cotton, 3,605 hhds. of tobacco, 11,228 tierces of rice ; total value $9,966,503 : and in six months, ending the 31st of March 1818, 61,797 bales of cotton, 13 680 tierces of rice, and 1,500 hhds. of tobacco. The shipping belonging to this port, in 1821, amounted to 10,826 tons. Vessels drawing 14 feet of water come up to the wharfs ; larger vessels take in their cargoes at Five Fathom Hole, 3 miles below the town. On the east side of the city is Fort Wayne ; at Five Fathom Hole is Fort Jackson ; and on Tybec island, near the mouth of the river, there is a light-house. On the 10th Jan. 1820, 463 buildings were destroyed in this city by fire. The damage was estimated at $4,000,000. The part burnt has been since mostly rebuilt with brick, in an improved style.

[m] Tennessee river, U. S. which rises from the Alleghany mountains, on the borders of N. C. It crosses the state of Tennessee in a SW. direction, enters Alabama, then pursues a westerly course for 150 or 200 miles, then takes a northern course, crosses the state of Tennessee again, and the western part of the state of Kentucky, and joins the Ohio, 12 miles below the Cumberland, and 46 above the Mississippi. It is about 1,100 miles long, and navigable for steam boats, at high swells, 259 miles to Florence, in Alabama, at the lower end of the Muscle shoals, and for boats at all seasons. Here it widens, and becomes too shallow for boats to pass when the water is low. Above the shoals, boats pass without obstruction 250 miles to the Suck, or Whirl, where the river breaks through the Cumberland mountains. Just as the river enters the mountains, a great rock projects from the northern shore, which causes a sudden bend in the river. The water is thrown with great violence against the southern shore, where it rebounds around the point of the rock, and produces the whirl. The river is here compressed to the width of about 70 feet. Boats ascend and descend the whirl without great difficulty.

young ladies' academy, a public library of 1,200 volumes, a cotton and woollen manufactory, a rope walk, 2 distilleries, and 3 houses of public worship, 1 for Presbyterians, 1 for Methodists, and 1 for Baptists. It is a thriving and wealthy town, the largest in the state, and is situated in a fertile and populous country, and has a flourishing trade. Two newspapers are published here. There is a steam boat navigation from Nashville to New Orleans. The Cumberland is navigable to this place for vessels of 30 or 40 tons, 9 months in the year, and at certain times, for ships of 400 tons. The distance of Nashville from New Orleans, by land through Natchez, is 586. A road is opening through Madisonville, distance 480 miles. Cumberland College was incorporated here in 1806, and a building about 90 feet long, and 3 stories high, was erected; but the college has not gone into operation, and a grammar school is kept in the building.

It is pleasantly situated, regularly laid out, built principally of brick, and contains a court-house, a jail, a market-house, a bank, a land-office, a printing-office, 2 houses of public worship, 1 for Presbyterians and 1 for Methodists, and about 25 trading-stores. It is situated in a very fertile country, from which is exported annually, 12 of 14,000 bales of cotton. A very large and abundant spring, the source of Indian creek, supplies the town with excellent water. A boat navigation, from Huntsville to the Tennessee, has recently been opened by clearing out Indian creek, and forming a canal of 4 or 5 miles.

[r] Greensborough, post-town and capital Greene co. Georgia; 30 S. Athens, 38 N. Milledgeville, W. 662. Population in 1810, 413. It is a flourishing town, and contains a court-house, a jail, a Presbyterian meeting-house, an academy, and a printing-office.

$4,000. The funds consist of 100,000 dols. in bank stock, together with some lands. In 1821, a bill passed the assembly of Georgia, appropriating $ 25,000 for the erection of a new college edifice, and a permanent annual endowment of $8,000 for the support of the institution.

The college is under the direction of 15 trustees; and of a senatus academicus, composed of the trustees and the governor and senate of the state. The executive government is entrusted to a president; 3 professors, 1 of languages, 1 of chemistry, and 1 of mathematics and natural philosophy, and 1 tutor. The number of students in 1821, was 99. Commencement is held on the 3d Wednesday in June. There are two vacations; one in the summer of 3 weeks; the other in the winter, of 8 weeks.

Connected with the college there is an academy or free grammar school, which had, in 1821, 80 students.

[h] St. Simon's, fertile island, on the coast of Georgia, at the mouth of the Altamaha; 15 m. long, and 4 broad. Chief town, Frederica. The northern part is separated from the main island by a small creek, and is called Little St. Simon's. Between Little St. Simon's and Egg island, the southern branch of the Altamaha communicates with the ocean. The island is separated from the main land by a navigable river, which communicates with the Altamaha, and flows into St. Simon's sound.

[i] Florida is in length from N. to S. about 400 m.—average breadth, about 140. Square miles, 45,000. Its principal towns are Pensacola, St. Augustine, New-Smyrna, and St. Marks.—The rivers of most note, are, St. John's, Appalachicola, Indian River, Suwaney, and Conecuh.

The river St. John has a course of upwards of 200 miles.—The great swamp Ouaquephenogaw, lies on the north side, partly in Florida, and partly in Georgia. Its circuit is 300 miles.

The soil is various, but generally light and sandy; the best is called Hammock land, from the circumstance of its being found in mounds or small tufts, among the pines: these are remote from the sea. Florida produces all kinds of trees and fruits peculiar to tropical regions. Peaches, grapes, and figs, grow wild in the forests. St. John's river, and some of the Lakes, are bordered with orange groves. During the summer, the heat is excessive; but from the end of September to the end of June, it is, according to Volney, the "finest climate in the world." There are in the territory 35 Indian settlements, and about 5,000 Indians. A district of country is selected by government for the purpose of concentrating the Indian population. From a survey lately made of the Indian reservation, the following particulars are taken: "The whole district of country around Charlotte's river and bay, present to the eye only flat pine barrens, and parched palmetto plains, intersected by grassy ponds, and inundated savannahs, many of these exhibiting strong indications of having but recently emerged from the ocean, and exposed to occasional revisitations. The ridges of the Alachua extend in a SE. direction to 40 or 50 miles south of the sources of Oclewaha river. Similar ridges of nearly equal elevation are found near the North Hillsborough, Amaxura, and Tallachopeo rivers.

This last river rises in a large lake, about 45 miles east of the bay of Sauld Spiriti, and discharges into Charlotte's harbour at the same point with Charlotte's river. The whole country from the Santa Fe to the S. end of the Big Hammock, near the Chicuchatty village, presents elevated undulating pine lands, interspersed or spotted with hammocks of greater or less magnitude of light and more durable soils, diversified with pine flats, and intersected with grassy and clear water ponds."

Pensacola, the chief town in W. Florida, has a pleasant situation on a sandy plain, elevated 18 or 20 feet above the level of the sea, on the W. side of Pensacola bay. The town was in a state of decay when it came into the possession of the U. States, since which it has become flourishing. The harbour is capacious and safe from all winds, and the only commodious one, belonging to the United States in the Gulf of Mexico. The climate is uncommonly salubrious. Pop. in 1822, 1,600.

St. Mark's, 80 S. St. Mary's, 310 SSW. Charleston, W. 380. Lon. 81. 40. W. Lat. 29. 45. N. The town is built on a peninsula, is of an oblong form, consisting of 4 principal streets, which intersect each other at right angles. It has a pleasant situation, with the advantage of refreshing sea breezes, and the fragrance of orange groves, and, previously to 1821, has been accounted remarkably healthy. It has a good port, but the bar at its entrance is not passable for vessels drawing more than 8 feet of water. The houses, about 500 in number, are built of stone formed by the concretion of shells, and obtained from the island of St. Anastasia near the town. It is defended by a strong fort, which is built of this stone, and which presents a most formidable appearance on entering the harbour. It is 20 feet high, with walls 12 feet thick, and mounting 36 guns. The Catholic church is an old Gothic building. The city has a decayed appearance, many of the houses being in a state of dilapidation. The situation of the country in the vicinity, is low, but well adapted to the cultivation of vegetables and fruits of a southern climate. This town was burnt by Sir Francis Drake in 1586; by captain Davis, with the Buccaneers, in 1685; besieged and burnt by the English in 1702; unsuccessfully attacked by the English under general Oglethorpe in 1744; in 1821, Feb. 22, a treaty was signed by which Florida was ceded to the United States. A few years before the cession to the United States, the population of St. Augustine was estimated at 5,000. In 1821, it was visited with distressing sickness by the yellow fever: the population in August, 1821, was estimated at 2,500; in December, at only 1,500 or 1,600. A newspaper is published here.

This town was laid out in 1813, by Josiah Blakely, Esq. The streets are laid out 99 feet wide, crossing each other at right angles, running N. and S., E. and W. The site occupies a mile square, and is elevated and pleasant. The harbour is convenient and secure. Vessels drawing 12 feet water can enter the port at full tide, and those that draw 16 feet, can approach within 12 miles. The town is abundantly supplied with excellent water, and is expected to become a place of commercial importance. a newspaper is published here.

The site is on a beautiful and extensive plain, elevated about 15 feet above the level of high tides, and open to refreshing breezes from the bay, of which it commands a handsome prospect. The streets are generally of good width, and most of them intersect each other at right angles. The approach to the harbour, for vessels drawing more than 8 feet of water, is circuitous and difficult. Within a low grassy island, which lies opposite to the town, there is a good shelter for vessels.

Mobile was first settled about 1700. It was taken possession of by the U. S. in 1813, at which time it contained about 100 houses, mostly mean decaying wooden buildings of one story. It was incorporated as a city in 1819, and has become a place of flourishing commerce. During the year ending Sept. 30, 1821, 25,390 bales of cotton were shipped from this port.

The number of clearances, in 1818, was 274, and of entrances, including barges and keel boats, 360. The value of importations was estimated at upwards of $ 3,000,000. The shipping belonging to this district, in 1818, amounted to 2,216 tons.

[a] Is situated on level ground, upon the eastern bank of the Great Miami River, just below the confluence of that and Mud Rivers. It is a flourishing town, the seat of justice for Montgomery county, and contains an academy, 2 places of worship, upwards of 20 offices and mercantile stores, of various kinds, and above 100 dwelling houses; besides which, are numerous mills in the vicinity, particularly on Mud River, which is excellently calculated for machinery of every kind, necessary to be propelled by water. Distance from Columbus, 66 miles.

[b] The seat of justice for Miami county, Ohio, on west bank of the Great Miami, which river rises in the Indian lands, NW. of Champaign county, interlocking in its course, with the head waters of the Sciota. It runs in a south-westerly direction, above 100 miles across the north-western part of Champaign, and through Miami, Montgomery, Butler, and Hamilton counties, into the Ohio River, exactly in the south-western corner of the State, by a mouth 200 yards wide. The river is bordered by some of the best arable lands in the State, but is not of easy navigation on account of the rapidity of its current.—It is, however, navigated to a limited extent, 75 miles, and some of its waters approach so near those of the Anglaize, a branch of the Maumee, that a communication is effected by a portage of 5 miles.

[c] A post-town in Miami county, Ohio, principally noted as being the place of residence of one of the Indian Agents, and for several minor treaties here held with the original natives.

[d] A considerable river, rising in the north-eastern part of the State of Indiana, and flowing north-eastwardly across the north-western borders of the State of Ohio, enters the western extremity of Lake Erie. It is from 150 to 200 yards wide, and navigable 33 miles from the mouth, where commences a course of shoals and rapids, extending 15 miles, to within 18 miles of the Lake.

[e] Capital of Green county, Ohio, on Shawnee Creek, 3 miles from the Little Miami, and 55 south-westwardly from Columbus, containing an academy, a court-house, 2 houses of worship, 11 stores, and 600 inhabitants.

[f] Situated in Green county, near the source of the Little Miami, are considered a curiosity, and are said to possess strong medicinal qualities. Here is a post-office.

[g] A flourishing town, and capital of Champaign county, Ohio, situated in a fertile and fast improving district of country. It contains the county buildings, a church, a bank, a printing-office, a market-house, 9 mercantile stores, 120 houses, principally of wood, and 600 inhabitants.

[h] A town recently laid out at the lower rapids of Maumee river, on its SE. bank, 140 NW. from Columbus. It is named in honour of Captain Perry, who won his celebrated victory a short distance from the mouth of the Maumee.

[j] Muskingum is the largest river in Ohio, running its whole distance in the State. It rises in the southern borders of the Connecticut Western Reserve, and flowing in a very winding, but generally south-westwardly direction, falls into the Ohio river at Marietta, by a mouth 250 yards wide. It is navigable for large batteaux, 100 miles, according to the various windings of the river, and 45 miles farther into a small lake, with boats, from whence with one mile portage, a water communication is effected through Cuyahoga river, into Lake Erie.

[k] Hockhocking river, Ohio, rises in the central parts of Fairfield county, and flowing in a south-eastern direction, 30 miles, enters the Ohio river at Troy, 25 miles below Marietta. Its width does not exceed 50 yards, but from its depth in proportion to the quantity of water, it is one of the best streams for boat navigation in the country. Near its source is a very romantic cascade in the stream, the water falling over a stratum of rock, of above 40 feet perpendicular height.

[l] The seat of justice for Athens county. It is situated on a peninsula, formed by a large southerly bend of the Hockhocking river, which beautifully winds about the town. It has an elevated healthy situation, commanding an extensive prospect of the surrounding country. The Ohio University was incorporated in 1801, but is not yet in full operation. Besides the college buildings, the town contains a court-house and about 50 dwelling houses.

[m] A flourishing town on the western bank of the Ohio river, and seat of justice for Jefferson county. It is regularly laid out, was incorporated in 1805, and contained in 1820, 2,539 inhabitants. It is remarkable for a number of mills and manufactories, the machinery of which is put in operation by the power of steam. Besides which, there are 3 churches, an academy, 2 banks, a market house, 50 mercantile stores, a printing-office, and had, in 1817, 453 houses; 38 miles WSW. from Pittsburg, and 150 E. by N. from Columbus.

[n] The seat of justice for Belmont county, Ohio, having an elevated position on the great road, leading from Wheeling, Va. to the interior of the State; 11 miles W. from Wheeling, 70 E. Zanesville, and 130 in the same direction from Columbus. It is pleasant and flourishing, situated in a country hilly, but fertile in grain, and contains the county buildings, 3 churches, a bank, 2 printing-offices, 15 stores, and 641 inhabitants.

[o] Columbus, the capital of the State of Ohio, was laid out in 1812, the native timber then standing. In 1817, it contained a handsome state-house, 75 by 50 feet, a building for the public offices, on a line with it, 120 by 25, a bank, a penitentiary, a market-house, 2 printing-offices, 200 dwelling-houses, and 1400 inhabitants. It has a fine elevated situation, on the E. bank of Sciota, just below the confluence of the Whetstone river, in the centre of Franklin county, and within 20 miles of the centre of the state; 115 miles north-eastwardly from Cincinnati, and 90 from the mouth of Sciota river.

[p] Metropolis of Kentucky, in Franklin county, on Kentucky river, 60 miles above its confluence with the Ohio. Its situation is on an alluvial plain, 200 feet lower than the ground in its rear. The river which is here 100 yards wide, forms a handsome curve, and waters the southern and western parts of the town.

The situation, which was formerly unhealthy, has been much improved by draining. The state house is built of rough marble, 86 by 54; besides which, there are a court-house, a market house, a state bank, an academy, 2 churches, and 3 printing-offices; there are, also, several rope-walks, and other manufactories. Large brigs have been built here and sent to New Orleans. Population, 1,679.

[q] A pleasant town, and capital of Bracken county, Kentucky, 60 miles NE. from Lexington. It contains the county buildings, an academy, and church.

[r] Rises in Licking county, Ohio, and running E. enters the Muskingum, opposite Zanesville. Near its mouth are falls which afford many excellent mill seats.

[s] Capital of Campbell county, Kentucky, opposite Cincinnati, just above the entrance of the Licking river. It has a beautiful situation, on an elevated plain, commanding a fine prospect, and contains the county buildings, a bank, an academy, a market-house, and a United States' arsenal.

[t] Louisville, capital of Jefferson county, Kentucky, is situated on the Ohio, at the head of the Rapids, 122 miles below Cincinnati. Its site is on an eminence, 70 feet above the shores of the river, towards which it gradually descends to a narrow plain along its banks. It is the second town in the State, and contains 2 banks, one of which is a branch of the United States' bank, an academy, 2 printing-offices, various other public buildings, and extensive rope-walks and manufactories. Population 4,012.

[u] Capital of Mercer county, Kentucky, a flourishing town, containing the county buildings, a bank, a printing office, a church, and in 1817, 200 houses. There are also several valuable mills and manufactories. It is situated in a fertile and populous country, and intended to be the seat of a college, a charter for which has been granted by the Legislature.

[v] A pass through the Cumberland Mountains, in Claiborne county, Tennessee, 130 miles S. of Lexington. The Cumberland Mountains commence in SW. part of Pennsylvania, and in Virginia takes the name of Laurel Mountains, and passing through the SE. part of Kentucky, terminate in Tennessee, 80 miles SE. Nashville.

[y] Capital of Montgomery county, Tennessee, on N. bank of the Cumberland, 60 miles NW. from Nashville. It contains a court-house, a jail, and in its vicinity there is an academy.

[z] St. Genevieve is situated on the W. bank of the Mississippi, 120 miles above the mouth of the Ohio, and 60 miles below St. Louis. The town lies a mile from the landing, at the mouth of the Gabbarie, and on ground which is handsomely elevated. It was originally settled by the French from Kaskaskia, and although a considerable part of the inhabitants are now Americans, the French character still predominates. This is one of the principal lead markets; formerly all the lead made at the mines, was shipped from this place. It contains a Roman Catholic chapel, a court-house, and about 300 houses. A branch of the Missouri bank is here established.

[a] This river rises in the mining district. Missouri, and running a southerly course, 500 miles with its windings, and about half that distance in a direct line, enters the Mississippi, 107 miles above Arkansas. It is navigable 250 miles, and flows through various kinds and qualities of land, some excellent, mixed with some that is rocky, and much that is swampy, low, and overflown.

[b] White river originates among the Pawnee Mountains, near the 97 degree of W. longitude, and about the 36th of N. latitude, and after running a very serpentine course for 1300 miles, enters the Mississippi, 50 miles above the mouth of the Arkansas, and 700 above New-Orleans. Its waters are beautifully clear and transparent.*

[c] Little Rock, the seat of Government for Arkansas Territory, is situated in the county of Pulaski, on the S. bank of the Arkansas, about 150 miles from its mouth by land, and 300 by water. The most important town in the Territory, containing the offices of government, a land-office, a printing-office, and several trading houses. Its site is on a bluff, on which is a rock, the first that is seen in ascending the river: the place on this account has obtained its name.

[d] The Choctaw Agency, in the Choctaw country, Mi. 4 miles W. Pearl river. There is also a mission established among the Choctaw Indians at Elliot, on a branch of the Yazoo, and another on a branch of the Tombigbee. This nation, estimated to be in number 20 or 25,000, reside between the Mississippi and the Tombigbee, and appear to be susceptible of improvement in the arts of civilized life.

[e] Capital of Henderson county, Kentucky, on the Ohio, a small town, containing a court-house and a bank. Its trade consists principally in tobacco.

* For a more particular account of this river, see Schoolcraft's "View of the Lead Mines of Missouri," from which several extracts are taken.

[f] One of the largest and most flourishing towns in Tennessee, situated on the Harpeth, 17 miles SSW. from Nashville. It is the seat of justice for Williamson county. Here are a court house, a bank, and a printing-office, from which is issued a weekly newspaper.—Population in 1818, 1,500.

[g] The capital of Smith county, Tennessee, on the Cumberland River, 50 miles E. from Nashville. It contains the county buildings, an academy, a printing-office, 2 churches, and upwards of 400 inhabitants.

[h] Capital of Greene county, Kentucky, on Greene river, 70 miles W. from Lexington. Besides the county buildings, there are in this town, a church, an academy, and 2 manufactories, 1 for cotton and 1 for woollen. In its vicinity, a mine of Manganese has been lately discovered.

[i] A flourishing town, containing a court-house, jail, bank, market-house, and church. It is the capital of Nelson county, Kentucky, situated on Beech Fork River, sometimes called Bairdstown.

[j] Cumberland river takes its rise in the Cumberland mountains, Virginia, and running through Kentucky and Tennessee, enters the Ohio 60 miles from the Mississippi. It is navigated with large vessels nearly 200 miles to Nashville, and for boats of 15 tons, 300 miles further. At some seasons, vessels of 400 tons may descend from the distance of 400 miles to the Ohio.

[k] Capital of Garrard county, Kentucky, 32 miles S. from Lexington, a small town, of 260 inhabitants, in which, besides the county buildings, is a bank.

[l] The State of Tennessee extends through ten degrees of west longitude. The eastern part abounds in mountains, distinguished by numerous appellations. Among these, the Cumberland Mountain, or Great Laurel Ridge, is the most remarkable in this region. The soil is poor, except in the fertile valleys encircling the mountains, which are from 5 to 15 miles wide.

Here the climate is generally healthy and temperate. The central part of the State is hilly, but contains large quantities of excellent land; the climate resembles that of Kentucky. In the western part, bordering on the Mississippi, there is a black rich soil; on some of the low bottoms the climate is unhealthy.

There are a variety of minerals and mineral springs in the State. The principal rivers, the Cumberland and Tennessee, have been already described.

[m] Rises in the Laurel Ridge, and pursuing a NNW. course, separates Virginia from Kentucky, for nearly 200 miles, and enters the Ohio, 4 miles above the Sciota. It is navigable about 50 miles with batteaux.

[n] Mobile city, is situated on a beautiful elevated plain, 15 feet above the level of high tides, on W. side of Alabama river.

It is the capital of Mobile county, in the state of Alabama, 30 miles N. of Mobile Point, 55 W. by N. from Pensacola, and 150 S. by W. from Cahawba:

Mobile was first settled about 1700, and taken possession of by the United States in 1813, at which time there were 140 whites, exclusive of those employed in the garrison. In 1818, it was estimated to contain 2,800 white inhabitants, 240 dwelling-houses, 110 stores and ware-houses, a court-house, a bank, 2 churches, and 2 printing-offices. In 1818, the value of importations was estimated at $3,000,000, consisting principally of cotton, of which article, during the year ending september 30, 1821, 25,390 bales were shipped from this port. It was incorporated as a city, in 1819, since which, it has rapidly increased in population and wealth.

[o] Capital of Baldwin county, Alabama, on the Tensaw, or East Channel of the Mobile, 6 miles N. of Mobile Bay, and 10 ENE. from Mobile. It was laid out in 1813, on a pleasant elevated site, a mile square, the streets 99 feet wide, cross each other at right angles. The harbour is safe and convenient for vessels drawing 12 feet of water; those that draw 16 feet, can approach only within 12 miles of the port. Blakely is expected to become a place of considerable commercial importance: situated near the head of a capacious bay, which receives the waters of two large rivers, and their tributaries, it will, with Mobile, naturally be a depot for the produce of a great extent of country.

[p] In Dallas county, Alabama, on the W bank of the Alabama river, which has here an almost perpendicular height of 30 feet. It is 10 miles NE. from Cahawba, and contains a church, an academy, and 10 trading houses.

[q] Capital of Tuscaloosa county, at the falls of the river of the same name. It was first settled in 1816; in 1821, it contained 700 inhabitants, 2 churches, and a printing-office. The Tuscaloosa takes its rise a few miles S. of the Tennessee river. It is the principal eastern branch of the Tombigbee, which it joins 30 miles above St. Stephens. It is navigable 60 or 70 miles to the falls. Tuscaloosa is the Choctaw Indian name for Black Warrior.

[r] Is here, in latitude 31 N. running from Pearl R. on the E. to Mississippi on the W. which from this point forms the eastern boundary of the State, to 33 N. The Gulf of Mexico is the southern boundary, and the Sabine River, the western from its mouth, to 32 N.; thence the boundary line proceeds due N. to latitude 33; thence due E. to the Mississippi, having Arkansas Territory on the N. Louisiana was admitted into the Union in 1812; New Orleans is the capital and only large town in the State.

A district of country on the S., 250 miles in length, and from 70 to 140 wide, extending from Lake Borgne to Sabine river, and from the Gulf of Mexico to Baton Rouge and Red river, is an alluvial tract of low Champaign land, intersected by numerous rivers, bays, creeks, and lakes, dividing the country into a great number of islands. A large extent of country in this state, is annually overflowed—estimated by Mr. Darby, at 2,770 square miles. The southern half of the State is highly productive in cotton, sugar, rice, corn, and indigo. The south-western part, comprising the districts of Opelousas and Attakapas, consists mostly of extensive prairies. The northern part presents an undulating surface, covered with a heavy growth of timber.

The climate in the southern parts of the State, is hot, sultry, and unhealthy; in the northern, temperate and salubrious.—The annual profits, resulting from the labour of 50 hands, employed in cultivating these three articles in Louisiana, has been calculated to be as follows: sugar, $12,000, rice, $4,200, cotton, $9,000.

[s] St. Michael is situated on a plain on Village Creek, which falls into the River St. Francis a mile below. It is an old French village, of about 50 houses, including several stores and a post-office, and lies in the richest farming district in Madison county, Missouri. The seat of justice for the county, has lately been fixed on rising grounds, about 600 yards S. of the village, and a town laid out there, called Fredericktown.

[t] Potosi, and Mine à Burton, form one connected village, which may altogether consist of 30 buildings, including a court house, jail, and academy. Potosi lies on a handsome eminence, a little N. of the principal mines, and separated only from Mine a Burton, by the Mine Creek. This village is pleasantly situated in the centre of the Mining District, and surrounded, also, by several fine bodies of land. It is built in a better style than the villages in the country generally, has a neat and thriving appearance, and contains several handsome edifices. It is 65 miles distant from St. Louis, and 45 from St. Genevieve.

[u] A large navigable stream rises near the head waters of the Gasconade, in the range of hills in the interior of the State of Missouri, and running a devious course, empties into the Mississippi, 18 miles below St. Louis. The town of Merri-mack was laid off on the banks of this stream in 1817, 30 miles W. of St. Louis.

[v] Or, Makitosh, is the capital of Natchitoches county Louisiana, on S.W. bank of Red river, about 200 miles above its junction with the Mississippi, and 200 m. in a right line, N.W. New Orleans. It is the largest town in Louisiana, W. of the Mississippi. About two-thirds of the inhabitants are Americans, and the remainder French. It contains a Roman Catholic church, a jail, and a United States' factory. A few miles above the town, on Red river, is the seat of the Indian Agency. Pop. in 1818, upwards of 600.

[w] These springs are situated on a stream called Hot Spring Creek, which falls into the Washita river, 8 miles below.— They lie 50 miles S. of the Arkansas river, in Clark county, Arkansas Territory. The approach to the springs lies up the valley of the Creek, and on coming near them, the traveller is presented with one of the most picturesque views of nature.— On the right hand rises the Hot Mountain, with springs issuing at its foot. On the left, the Cold Mountain, which is little more than a confused and mighty pile of stones. The view in front is terminated by a high point of land which makes down gradually into the valley, and separates the creek into two forks of nearly equal size. The Hot Mountain is about 300 feet high, rising quite steep; the springs are very numerous all along the hill side, and the water which runs in copious streams, is quite hot, reckoned about 200° of Fahrenheit. The water looks extremely clear, pure, and beautiful, and is said to prove efficacious in all chronic complaints. They are destined to become a place of great resort—the Ballston of the South.—[SCHOOLCRAFT.]

[x] A small town, consisting of a few houses, in Texas, Mexico. It has a fine healthy situation, supplied with excellent water. Here are, also, a small fort and a Roman Catholic church.

[y] Capital of Opelousas county, Louisiana, about 60 miles W. Baton Rouge, and 220 WNW. New Orleans, a place of little consequence, containing the county buildings, an academy, a Roman Catholic church, and about 25 dwelling-houses.

[z] The Great Osages, are about 4,000 in number—the Little, 2,000. They live in separate settlements in the Missouri Territory, on the Osage river, near 200 miles above its junction with the Missouri. About 150 miles SW. of these settlements, on the waters of the Arkansas, are the Osages of Arkansas, upwards of 2,000 in number. The principal village consists of 145 dwellings, compactly built, each containing from 10 to 15 persons. The average height of the men is above six feet. The situation of the village is in the centre of a vast prairie. A missionary station was formed here in 1820.

[a] This settlement emigrated to the Arkansas Territory several years since, and settled in a fertile tract of country, on both sides of the Arkansas river, 4 or 500 miles from its mouth. Their number is estimated at 6,000. Here is also a Missionary establishment

[b] Is formed by the Theakiki and Plein, in the NW. part of Indiana, in latitude 41 43 N. It passes into Illinois, pursues, generally, a south-westerly direction, and flows into the Mississippi, 21 miles above the Missouri, by a mouth upwards of 400 yards wide. It is about 400 miles long from its junction to the Mississippi, and is of easy navigation.

[c] In the Mississippi, Long. 93 40 W. Lat 44 15 N. The river is 627 yards broad above the falls, and immediately below, it is contracted within a channel of 209 yards. An island divides the falls into two parts. The perpendicular height of the cataract, is $16\frac{1}{2}$ feet, besides 58 feet more of a rapid below, so that when viewed from a distance, it appears to be much higher than it is. When the river is high, the appearance of these falls is very sublime, as the spray then formed, reflects all the colours of the rainbow. The surrounding country is extremely beautiful, exhibiting many gentle ascents, with eminences covered with the finest verdure. The portage around the falls is 260 rods long.

[d] Winnepeck Lake, towards the sources of the Mississippi, the main branch of which passes through it; is in Lat. 48 10 N. and 145 miles above the falls of St. Anthony. It is 14 miles long, and 9 wide, the water deep and transparent, and the shores low. Little Winnipeg, 10 miles below, is 5 miles long, and 3 broad. The tract of country containing the sources of the Mississippi, St. Lawrence, and Red rivers, and Lake Winnipeg, which lake is in about 50 degrees N. Lat., is wet and swampy, producing a remarkable vegetable called wild rice. It grows in water from 4 to 7 feet deep, and is gathered by the Indians in canoes.

[e] Fort Clark is on a delightful site for a town, in a tract of prairie country, at the south entrance of Lake Piora, or Illinois, in Lat. 40 40 N.

[f] Situated on Lake Michigan, at the mouth of Chicago Creek, in a beautiful and fertile country. It contains 12 or 15 houses, and about 60 or 70 inhabitants. Fort Dearborn stands on the S. side of the creek; the garrison consists of about 160 men.

[g] The capital of St. Charles county, Missouri, and the temporary capital of the state, is situated on the N. bank of the Missouri, about 20 miles above its confluence with the Mississippi. The site is elevated beyond the inundations of the river, but the bank continually wearing away. It is built on a narrow space, between the river and a considerable bluff, which admits of but one street. The town of St. Charles was first founded by the French, in 1780. Since the cession of Louisiana, it has increased rapidly. Its advantageous and healthy situation has attracted the attention of emigrants from other States, and it now contains about 1,200 industrious and enterprising inhabitants.

[h] Situated between the 36th and 40th degrees of N. latitude. The Territory of Missouri enjoys a climate of remarkable serenity, and temperate warmth. It is equally exempted from the hot summers of the South, and the cold winters of the North. No country surpasses the banks of the Missouri for the vigour of its crops, consisting of corn, wheat, rye, oats, flax, hemp, tobacco, sweet potatoes, clover, Timothy, and blue grass. The climate and soil are also adapted to the growth of various kinds of fruit trees. Some varieties of the grape are delicious.

No country in the world affords such an extent of inland navigation by its streams, as the basin lying between the Alleghany and the Rocky Mountains, and whose congregated waters are carried to the ocean, by those stupendous natural canals, the Mississippi, the Missouri, the Ohio, and the Illinois.

The Mississippi, itself, in whose current all these unite and are discharged into the Mexican Gulf, washes the eastern boundary of Missouri Territory, from the mouth of Des Moines, to near that of St. Francis, a distance of more than 500 miles, and may be navigated 3,500 miles from the ocean. The Missouri, swelled by its great tributaries, the Yellow Stone, Little Missouri, White Stone, Sioux, La Platte, Kansas, and Osage, pass diagonally, nearly through the centre of the state, affording on both sides, a wide extended tract of soil, transcendantly rich, and bearing a luxuriant growth of forest trees and plants, interspersed with prairies.

[SCHOOLCRAFT.

Population of Missouri, in 1820, was 66,586, consisting of people from various parts of the United States, and from Europe, the greater part of whom have emigrated into the Territory within the last 10 years.

[i] A flourishing town, and the seat of justice for Howard county, Missouri, on the N. bank of Missouri river. This place has increased with a rapidity almost unexampled. It was laid out in 1816, and contained, in 1821, upwards of 1,800 inhabitants, and 500 houses, some of them handsomely built of brick. It is regularly laid out, the streets $32\frac{1}{2}$ feet wide, with a public square of 2 acres, intended for public buildings, and situated in a district of country, healthy and fertile.

[j] Kansas river rises in the Rocky Mountains, and after an easterly course of 1,200 miles, unites with the Missouri, 340 miles from the Mississippi. It is 340 yards wide at its mouth.

[k] Or, Shoal River, rises also in the Rocky Mountains, and pursuing an easterly course of about 1,600 miles, enters the Missouri, 600 miles from the Mississippi.

[l] Arkansas river rises in the Rocky Mountains, about Lat. 42° N. near the sources of the Del Norte, and near the borders of the Territory of the United States and Mexico. It forms a part of the boundary between the Missouri Territory and Mexico, flows through the central part of Arkansas Territory, and unites with the Mississippi, Lat. 33° 40' N.; Its course is ESE. It is navigable for boats at some seasons, nearly 2,000 miles. Its channel is broad, and its navigation safe, unobstructed by rocks, shoals, or rapids.

[m] Or Wallaumut river, rises in the Rocky Mountains, and running a NW. course, enters the Columbia, 139 miles from its mouth. It is one of the largest branches of the Columbia, very deep, and 500 yards wide near its mouth.

PHILADELPHIA.

MANSION HOUSE HOTEL,

South Third-street, Philadelphia.

CHESTER BAILEY, has the honour to inform the Public, that he has taken this spacious establishment, which has been re-built, and is now furnished in the most genteel style. The beds and bedding, is entirely new, and the mattresses were purchased of Mr. Jackson, of New York, who is acknowledged to stand first as a manufacturer of that article. The superior advantages of this House, is too well known to be named, having a very spacious dining room, with reading and other rooms on the first floor, and five splendid parlours, beautifully furnished with bed rooms adjoining; particularly suited to the accommodation of families, added to which, are between forty and fifty single bed rooms, each of which has a fire place and bell.

The mail and citizens' coaches for New York, and mail for Baltimore, run to and from this hotel; and the proprietor intends to keep a first rate house, for comfort, convenience and taste, and hopes to receive such a share of patronage from the citizens of Philadelphia and the public, as they may think he merits.

JUDD'S HOTEL,

No. 27, South Third Street, Philadelphia.

The most central for business in the city; formerly kept by Anson Judd, now kept by his nephew, Dana Judd Upson. It has been improved the year past; affords good accommodations for families, and for gentlemen of business, having parlours, and many single bedded rooms. The stage coaches to New York and Baltimore, run to and from the door. Its patrons will find here, the delicacies of the season, the best of attendants, and every reasonable effort to please.

HIESKELL'S HOTEL,

Sign of the Indian Queen, No. 15, South 4th Street, Philadelphia.

The subscriber, grateful for past favours, informs his friends and the public generally, that he has enlarged and fitted anew this extensive and commodious establishment, which is decidedly the most central house in the city for business: it has a number of single bedded rooms, and, on the ground floor, it has a dining room, eighty feet in length, and three good sitting rooms. The house is within one square of the bank, theatre, museum, atheneum, and city library. He assures those that may favour him with a call, that every attention shall be paid to their comfort and convenience, by their obedient servant,

THOMAS HIESKELL, formerly of Virginia.

UNION HALL,

South-West Corner of Chesnut and Front Streets, Philadelphia, within 500 yards of the New York and Baltimore Steam Boats.

The subscriber having opened that large and commodious house at the south-west corner of Chesnut and Front streets, Philadelphia, and at a very great expense fitted it up as a hotel, begs leave to solicit a share of public patronage.

It being in the vicinity of the banks, public offices, custom-house, auction stores, and New-York, and Baltimore steam-boats, induces him to believe that he will receive a liberal share of custom. His table shall be furnished with the best the market affords (which is proverbial for excellence)—His bar is stored with the best of liquors—His beds are entirely new—His rooms with the aid of Lehigh coal, are kept warm in winter—and by the gentle breezes of the Delaware, cool in summer.

* * His charges are moderate, and every exertion will be made to render the establishment advantageous to the public.

JOS'A E. BRANSON.

Attached to the house is a reading room, with upwards of 20 papers from different parts of the Union.

GOLDEN SWAN HOTEL,

No. 63, North Third Street, Philadelphia.

The subscriber having taken the above establishment, which he has fitted up in the neatest manner, respectfully solicits the patronage of his friends and the public in general.

SWAIM'S PANACEA.

This valuable medicine has obtained a distinction which its efficacy alone can support. As a purifier of the blood it has no parallel. It is the most useful spring and autumn alterative ever known. All those who are affected with scrofula, leprosy, scurry, or cutaneous eruptions, or any of those melancholy diseases arising from impurity of the blood and juices—also, those who suffer by diseased liver rheumatic affections, or from indiscretion of their youth, as well as those whose constitutions are broken down by mercurial, antimonial, or arsenical medicines, should submit to a course of Swaim's Panacea. The effect of this medicine is such as not to interrupt either business or pleasure, and requires only the common restraints of moderation in diet. It is conveyed by the circulating fluids, and corrects their tendencies to all those diseases which originate in vitiated blood. It is a safe, though a powerful substitute for mercury, and removes those evils which an unsuccessful use of that mineral so often occasions, &c.

NEW-YORK.

CITY HOTEL.

Broadway, New-York.

CHESTER JENNINGS announces to the public that he still continues this spacious Hotel, the whole having undergone a thorough repair, every room been painted and furnished in the first style of elegance ; with a complete suit of rooms fitted up for the accommodation of travelling parties of ladies and gentlemen, containing superb drawing-rooms, parlours, and bedrooms, with beds large, and of the first quality. The present incumbent pledges himself that his exertions shall be unremitting, in order to supply the tables of the public and private dining halls with all that is rare in kind, or excellent in quality.

June, 1824.

THE MANSION HOUSE,

No. 39, Broadway, New-York.

By WILLIAM BUNKER. It is a desideratum with every gentleman who travels with his family, to put up at a house where all the advantages of a hotel mentioned by Dr. Johnson can be realized, while confusion, noise and vulgarity are avoided. The advantages of such institutions are in some instances realized in New-York. The Mansion House may be considered among those where the conveniences, variety, and luxuries of a first rate hotel, are combined with the retirement, stillness, and private conveniences of any gentleman's domestic mansion.

June, 1824.

PARK PLACE HOUSE,

Corner of Broadway and Park-Place, (late Mechanic-Hall, New-York.

This elegant establishment is well known for its comfort and convenience. Its airy and healthy situation, its proximity to the theatre, academy of fine arts, and the public baths, render it the most desirable residence for strangers, whether on journeys of pleasure or of business.

The table is supplied with whatever the season affords, and the Wines are of the best quality.

The apartments have been newly furnished, and the adjoining house in Broadway added to the establishment.

WASHINGTON HALL,

No. 282, Broadway, New-York.

By PETER McINTIRE. It is a happy circumstance that in the commercial metropolis of America, convenience, elegance, and refinement have kept pace with the bold strides of mercantile enterprize, and that the first merchants or travellers from Europe, or different parts of America, may find all the variety of refined luxury in the hotels of New-York, that they can in any commercial town of Europe. The above remarks are applicable to the elegant and spacious Mansion House in Broadway, long known as Washington Hall. June, 1824.

CUSTOM-HOUSE HOTEL,

In Wall-street, No. 4, near Broadway.

By P. F. DRAZE & C. HEISER. The Custom-House Hotel is one of the oldest as well as most respectable hotels in the city of New-York, and in point of proximity to the banks, custom-house, the insurance offices, and large exchange brokers, has the preference to every hotel in the city, as Wall-street is the great exchange mart and central point of all the merchants and men of great business in this commercial emporium.

July, 1824.

NEW-YORK COFFEE-HOUSE,

No. 10, William street, (near the Post Office,) New-York.

WILLIAM SYKES. An ordinary every day at 3 o'clock, excepting on Sundays, when dinner will be served at 2 o'clock.

Private Dinners, Suppers, &c. furnished in the best style, and sent out when desired.

Wines and liquors of the choicest kinds, and in great variety.

Racey's Pale Ale, and London Brown Stout, constantly on draught.

Excellent accommodations for travellers.

YORK HOUSE.

Nos. 5 and 7, Courtland-street, New-York.

This establishment, recently occupied by Mr. E. Morse, and long known to the public, has been taken by the subscriber, and refitted in handsome style, for the accommodation of Stage and Steam-boat Passengers, & of steady Boarders.

Its location is in the most healthy part of the city, and being at a point where the chain of communication, by stages, between the North, the East, and the South meets, offers peculiar advantages to the traveller; while its vicinity to the business part of the city, makes it still more desirable to the merchant.

An ordinary will be served daily at 2 P. M. and the best attendants procured; the charges moderate, and no pains spared to render the establishment agreeable to its visitors, and worthy of the extensive patronage it has heretofore received.

May 1st, 1824.

A. YOUNG.

NEW-YORK NORTHERN AND SOUTHERN STEAM-BOAT HOTEL.

By WILLIAM HARRISON, (at the foot of Courtland st.) Mr. H. respectfully informs his numerous patrons, and the public generally, that the above spacious and airy establishment has recently undergone a thorough repair, and is now open for the accommodation of ladies and gentlemen, by the day, week, or year, at reasonable prices.

This establishment, by its happy locality, combines a variety of advantages, which tend to render it particularly desirable. In addition to the comforts of a commodious building and a healthful situation, are united a beautiful prospect of the North River and York Bay, ever enlivened by the industry of commerce, and chequered by the movements of numerous steam-boats, constantly receiving and discharging passengers in front of the house.

The liberal patronage which has been hitherto enjoyed by the proprietor of this establishment, has induced him to expect a continuance of public favour, as the reward of an unremitted exertion to please.

New-York, April 10, 1824.

A. MOODY,

(Who has for the last 25 years kept a public house in the city of Albany,) informs his friends and the public in general, that he has taken that large and airy establishment on the corner of Broad and Pearl streets, known as the Broad street House New-York, where he will be very glad to see his old customers,

To those who know him and his house, he thinks it needless to say any thing—those who do not, can satisfy themselves by trying what his house affords.

July, 1824.

North River Steam-Boat Line, between New-York and Albany.

(Station foot of Courtlandt street, New-York.)

This line is composed of the Chancellor Livingston, Captain Center, of 520 tons burthen; the James Kent, Capt. Samuel Wiswall, of 400 tons; and the Richmond, Capt. Thomas Wiswall, of 350 tons; all vessels of the first class, built and equipped in the most substantial and expensive manner. Their boilers are all of copper, and the engines on the low-pressure system, precisely the same as adopted by Mr. Fulton in his life time. This line has been continued since the first invention of steam boats, without the smallest accident having happened to any person on board.

A boat is despatched daily from New-York, at 5 o'clock, P. M. excepting in the summer months, when the James Kent is despatched every Monday and Thursday, at 5 o'clock, A. M. and lands her passengers at Albany the same evening. This she has performed in the short space of fourteen hours and a half.

From Albany a boat is despatched every day at 11 o'clock, A. M. excepting in summer, when the James Kent departs on Wednesdays and Saturdays, at 5 A. M. and lands the passengers at New-York the same evening.

By means of this line, communication is regularly kept up with the Canadian steam boats, via Lake Champlain, and with Utica and Buffalo, and the western part of New-York, through the great Western Canal.

(Office, No. 152, Washington-street)

New-York and Rhode-Island Steam Boats.

(Station in New-York, at Fulton's slip, East River.)

The steam-boat Connecticut, Capt. E. S. Bunker, and the Fulton, Capt. Wm. Comstock, ply between Providence and Newport, R. I. and New-York. The Connecticut leaves New-York every Wedne-day at 3 o'clock, P. M. and the Fulton every Saturday at the same hour. Passengers by this line reach Boston the following evening. From Rhode Island the Fulton departs every Tuesday evening, and the Connecticut on Friday evening, arriving at New-York early the succeeding night.

These boats are 350 tons burthen, are copper fastened and coppered, have copper boilers and engines on the low pressure system: their commanders are men of great experience, and the boats have navigated the sound, for a number of years with perfect safety to the traveller.

Office at R. S. WILLIAMS & Co. corner of Fulton and South Street.

NEW YORK AND LIVERPOOL PACKETS.

These ships were all built in New-York, of the best materials; and are coppered and copper fastened, and are very fast sailers; their accommodations for passengers are uncommonly extensive and commodious, and they are commanded by men of great experience.

The price of passage to England in the cabin, is now fixed at $140; for which sum passengers will be furnished with beds and bedding. Wine and stores of all kinds. For further particulars, apply to

ISAAC WRIGHT & SON,
FRANCIS THOMSON,
BENJAMIN MARSHALL,
JEREMIAH THOMPSON.

LONDON AND NEW-YORK PACKETS.

With the view of offering to the public great facility in the intercourse between this port and London, and especially of inviting the attention of the passengers destined to either Great Britain or the continent, to the ships employed in this trade, the subscribers, in conjunction with their friends, have established a line of packet ships, consisting of the Ship Brighton,.....	Sebor,.....	Master.

Do Crisis,...	M'Manus,.....	do.
Do Acasta,.....	Griswold,.....	do.
Do Hudson,.....	Champlin,.....	do.

New ship, to be built.

One of which they intend shall sail punctually from New-York and from London, on the first of every month, throughout the year.

These ships are all of the first class, and are commanded by men of activity and experience. They are about 400 tons burthen, copper fastened and coppered, and in every respect fitted in the best manner. The accommodations will be very spacious, and the furniture, stores, &c. made to suit the comfort and convenience of passengers. The line will commence with the departure of the new ship Brighton, to sail on the first July from this port, and from London on the 1st September. The other ships to follow in regular succession. For further particulars, apply to

JOHN GRISWOLD, 68 South-street, or
FISH & GRINNEL, 136 Front-street.

N. B. the ships of the above line will touch at Cowes each way, for the purpose of landing and receiving passengers.

June 1824.

PACKETS FOR HAVRE.

A line of packets has been established between New-York and Havre, to leave both ports regularly on the 1st and 15th days of each month during the year. The ships composing the line, are fast sailers, well found and commanded, coppered and copper fastened. Their accommodations for passengers, comprise all that can be required for comfort and convenience.—Passengers in the cabin will be taken for $140 each, for which they are furnished with beds, bedding, wines, and ample stores of every description. Goods intended for shipment by them, may be sent to agents who will attend to their reception and forwarding, without charge for storage or commissions. The expenses which may in such cases be actually incurred, will, when requested, be collected with the freight at Havre. A letter bag is at the New-York post-office, for all letters that may be sent by mail. Letters respecting either freight or passage, must be addressed, post-paid, to

June, 1824.

CRASSUS & BOYD,
Agents, New-York.

OLD LINE OF PACKETS FOR HAVRE.

The proprietors of this line, at the solicitation of many of their friends, have resumed the regular departure of their ships both from here and from Havre. In consequence one of them will leave this port on the 5th of every month, and from Havre the 25th of every month, commencing from here with

The ship Henry, Aaron Kemp, master, to sail from New-York on the 5th July, and from Havre on the 25th August.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SANS SOUCI HOTEL.

The subscriber hereby informs the public, that his boarding establishment, so well known in the United States, is now ready for the reception of company. He flatters himself that, by his assiduous exertion to please and accommodate his guests, that his house will be deservedly approved by those who make it a place of resort, as well for amusement and relaxation, as for the benefit of the medicinal waters. His liquors will be choice and select; and Congress water, and the waters of other springs in the vicinity, will be daily procured, in a pure state from the original fountains. Several lines of daily stages will stop at the above establishment; and coaches, for parties, or single horses, can at all times be had on the shortest notice.—His price of board will be $8 per week for individuals; and for gentlemen with their families, who engage board for one month or more, $6 per week for each person, and a further deduction of one half for children and servants. In short, the subscriber intends his establishment shall be so managed in all respects, as to render it to all who may please to call on him, satisfactory, pleasant and agreeable.

HARVY LOOMIS.

Ballston Spa, June 1st, 1824.

NB.—A female seminary of the first respectability, conducted by Mr. L. Booth, late from Albany, will be established in the village, on the first July next, where young ladies can be instructed in any branch of female education.

THE PAVILION—SARATOGA SPRINGS.

MRS. LEWIS, widow of Nathan Lewis, respectfully informs the numerous friends of her late husband, and the public, that she continues the above elegant establishment. Considerable improvements have been made since last season. The bed-rooms are airy, and beds of first quality; the wines and liquors are of the purest kind; and she feels confident that the arrangements made for the comfort and convenience of her guests, are such as will ensure a liberal share of patronage for herself and family.

July, 1824.

BELMONT HALL,

Schooley's Mountain Springs, New-Jersey,

Is now open and ready for the reception and accommodation of visitors. The establishment is sufficiently large to accommodate upwards of 100 persons; it is 4 stories high and situated on the most elevated part of the mountain; every improvement has been added that could be suggested, to render it in every respect a desirable residence for the comfort and convenience of its visitors. The hall is elegantly furnished, and the subscribers have been particularly careful in their selection of wines, and in procuring good and obedient waiters. Billiard tables, nine-pin alleys, shuffle-boards, quoits, swings, tilts, &c. together with piana fortes, and a good collection of musical instruments, have been added to the establishment. A band of music is also engaged here during the season.—Saratoga waters are constantly kept here, fresh from the springs, so that visitors can enjoy the benefit of those waters and Schooley's mountains, at the same time. As an additional convenience, the post office has been lately removed to Belmont Hall.

The situation of Belmont Hall is on the most pleasant part of the mountain, commanding a very extensive and beautiful prospect of the surrounding country. The salubrity of the air, and established qualities of the mineral waters, render this a most desirable retreat during the summer months, for invalids or persons of pleasure. June, 1824.

Stages leave Patten's stage-house, No. 71, Courtlandt street, New-York, Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays, for the Springs, and the Swan Tavern, North Third street, Philadelphia, on the same days.

C. BOWNE & SON.

N. B.—Carriages and horses always to let.

EXTRACT,

From a notice in the Palladium of Liberty.

"We have not been among those whose means have enabled them to test the peculiar advantages of these resorts, but from the information of those who have, and from a general consideration of the qualifications of each, we should think the one at Schooley's Mountain possesses advantages over the others, sufficient to claim for it a decided preference. Whilst preparations nearly, or altogether, similar in their effects upon the system, are abundantly manufactured by the chemist every where, which obviate the necessity of seeking the waters of almost every other mineral spring, the pure celibeate of Schooley's Mountain defies the power of the most skilled in the science. Similarity has frequently been attempted, but in vain have been sought from these preparations, a similar effect to that experienced from the pure stream from the rock.

"The country through which we approach this summit, of at least 500* feet above tide water, is agreeably interspersed with hills and dales, forests and hamlets, affording a scenery highly picturesque and beautiful. The roads are generally good, and lie over a rolling country, forming gentle and easy declivities through the whole route.

“The accommodations are of the very first order. The Messrs. Bownes deserve much credit for the exertions, which have been made by them to improve and embellish their beautiful establishment, well known by the name of Belmont Hall, at an expense of some 20,000 dollars. they have taken unwearied pains to be able to furnish every species of innocent amusement and recreation; and certainly deserve the patronage of the public”

MANSION HOUSE,

No. 349, North Market Street, Albany, N. Y.

Kept by J. W. ROCKWELL.

It is situated in a pleasant, business part of the city, in the vicinity of the several Banks and Post office. The street at this place is wide and pleasant, the house large and commodious, suitable for the accommodation of ladies and gentlemen travelling for health or pleasure. All who may favour him with their custom, may be assured that every attention will be paid to them to make their stay agreeable while at this house.

The Best Horses and Carriages, provided on the most reasonable terms; also near this house will be despatched evening and morning, two beautiful Canal boats, exclusively for passengers, to ply as a daily line on the canal between Albany and Schenectady, to leave this at nine A. M. passing in full view of the city of Troy, and ascending the canal by a number of locks. The traveller is presented with a delightful prospect of the celebrated Cahoes Falls, thence crossing the Mohawk river twice in aqueducts to Alexander bridge, where a line of Post coaches will be in waiting to carry such passengers as wish to visit Saratoga and Ballston Springs &c. The scenery on this route is said to be the most romantic and pleasing of any part of the Grand Canal.

CAMDEN VAUXHALL,

In Market street, a few steps above the Bank, N. J., directly opposite to Philadelphia, and but a few minutes passage in steam or horseboats; grateful to the public for the liberal encouragement which I have heretofore received, and desirous of becoming more and more worthy of that liberality, beg leave to announce to my friends and the public in general, that the garden is now open for those who may favour me with their company. Festival banquets, dinners, repasts, relishes, &c. &c. shall be promptly prepared with delicacy, taste, and order of exquisite cookery and at moderate prices, and the bar stored with choice liquors of the richest quality and flavour. Boarders can be accommodated with boarding and lodging, by the year, month, week, or day, by the public's humble servant,

JOSEPH LETOURNO.

JACOB HERBERT,

Rising Sun Hotel, Trenton, N. J.

To this long established and well known hotel, travellers are most respectfully invited, as it is the determination of the present proprietor to merit a liberal patronage from genteel travellers, families, parties, &c. with the conveniences, comforts, and luxuries, which his extensive house, his assiduous attention, and the market will afford.

BELLONA HALL,

New Brunswick, at New Brunswick, New-Jersey.

The public are respectfully informed that this establishment has lately been very much enlarged for the more convenient accommodation of travellers. It is connected with the steam boats Thistle and Bellona, that form a part of the Union line between New-York and Philadelphia. It is situated in the vicinity of the Landing place of the Steamboats, which renders it convenient to persons travelling in those Boats—large and extensive stables are attached to it, and carriages and horses will be furnished to persons travelling to any part of the state—With these advantages of situation, the proprietor solicits a portion of

New Brunswick, June 1st, 1824

WILLIAM SEGER, JERSEY CITY.

Offers his services to determine the true value of Leasehold Estates, Rights of Dower, Legacies, Annuities, and payments in reversion, annuities certain, life annuities, rights of survivorship, commutation of water rents, rights of lessees in property, taken for public purposes; and generally all kinds of pecuniary rights, not actually in possession, or which are in any way dependent on life or time. —Having a practical acquaintance with the principles, and calculations by which the real value of such property is ascertained, he believes he can render essential services in its purchase and sale. Letters addressed to him (post-paid) at Jersey City, N. J. will meet with prompt attention, or they may be left with Mr. Meeker, at the Jersey ferry house, at the foot of Courtlandt street, N. Y.

HORTON'S HOTEL, PROVIDENCE, R. I.

It may be said with truth, that no Town in the United States perhaps offers more comfort to travellers, either as families, select parties, individuals, than Horton's Hotel; delightfully situated near the centre of the town, on elevated ground, which overlooks the town and harbour,—within the last year it has undergone very extensive improvements; a spacious house has been added to the former establishment, expressly for ladies or families, fitted up in the neatest and most commodious style. In the front are shaded Piazzas, connected with their parlours, and retired not only from other visitors to, but from the dust and observation of the street. Carriages and gigs, with the best horses and careful drivers, may be had at the shortest notice, either for short rides, or journeys; the stage books are kept at the Bar.—The establishment on the whole offers a more healthy, inviting, and agreeable summer residence for strangers, than any other in the state of Rhode Island. The house is provided with the best servants.—Wines and liquors, and an ordinary, is served up at half past one o'clock.

Providence, April 29th, 1824.

ROSSBURG, PRINCE GEORGE'S COUNTY, MD. BY MR. LANDHAM.

This well known and respectable Stage Hotel, is situated in a very pleasant country, in whose fields and forests abound a great variety of game, which, together with the other rural objects, render it a desirable place for an excursion from Washington and Baltimore. The Hotel is in too high repute as a mansion, calculated for the most genteel company, to need any further remarks. From Rossburg to Montgomery C. H. 18 miles; Upper Marlborough, 21 miles; Washington, 9 miles, Baltimore, 28 miles.

JAMES A. BAYARD'S HOTEL,

1824.

IN TRENTON, NEW JERSEY.

UNION STEAM BOAT HOTEL, by Aaron O. Shuff, connected with the Union Line of Steamboats and Stages, via Trenton, Princeton, and Brunswick, the most eligible, expeditious, and pleasant route, between Philadelphia and New-York, and which is advertised in the great line of communications from Washington to the N. East extremity of the Union. The above mentioned Hotel is most delightfully situated on the Delaware river, near the Steamboat Landing, in Bloomsburg, one of the principal environs of Trenton. This Mansion House is spacious, convenient, and every way furnished and conducted on the most suitable style for genteel travellers. The Delaware flows before it; beyond which, and in full view, is the beautiful village of Morrisville, and the not less interesting, fertile, and highly cultivated farms of Pennsylvania. The last mentioned town is connected to Bloomsburg by Trenton Bridge, an interesting piece of architecture. But what is principally to be considered as a temporary residence for travellers, families from the south, &c. in the warm months; the situation of the Union Steamboat hotel is airy, salubrious, and extremely healthy. It also has the advantages of proximity to the Steamboat Landing, without the common imposing expenses levied on travellers by hack owners, who convey passengers from more remote parts of Trenton. It is, in short, without prejudice or partiality, one of the most eligible and best kept public houses between Philadelphia and New-York. And after long sustaining that character in the public estimation, which is the best test of merit, it is only necessary to observe that this statement is made by a journalist not to raise the estimation of the house, but merely to give that notice of it in this work, which may render it still better known as one among those first rate houses selected for advertisement in the National Directory.

October, 1824.

E. BLISS and E. WHITE, No. 128 Broadway, have republished from the London copy, a Work, in one octavo volume, entitled,

“THE PRESENT STATE OF ENGLAND in regard to Agriculture, Trade, and Finance; with a comparison of the prospects of England and France. By JOSEPH LOWE, Esq.” Dedicated to WILLIAM MANNING, Esq. M. P., and a Director of the Bank of England.

The leading articles of the Table of Contents of this interesting volume, are—

CHAPTER I.

Events of the war, from 1793, viewed in connexion with our national resources.

CHAPTER II.

Magnitude of our Expenditure and Sources of our Financial Supplies.—How far defrayed by loans, how far by taxes—

What were the sources of these great supplies?—Increase of employment during the war—Consequent increase of our revenue—Increase of our population—Estimate of our taxable income at different periods, from 1792 to 1814—Exemption from cash payments—The public not aware of the reaction to be apprehended at a peace.

CHAPTER III.

General Rise of Prices during the War.—The causes specified—Annual expense of our army, navy, and ordnance, from 1791 to 1815—Effect of this expenditure on the price of commodities—Exemplified by the rise of lands, houses, and other real property—How far was this rise nominal?—The case of money property, such as loans on mortgage—"Change in the value of money;" this expression defined.

CHAPTER IV.

Our Currency and Exchanges since 1792.—Historical sketch of the exchanges since 1792; and of the effects of our corn imports and subsidies—Tabular statement of these imports and subsidies—Our inconvertible bank paper; contradictory opinions on that subject—The bank restriction act—The opinion of the bullion committee on that act—Effects of that act in augmenting the disposable funds of bankers, facilitating discounts, and preventing the rise of interest—The question of depreciation and over-issue: Difference between an addition to the stock of bank paper and an increase of metallic currency—Discounts; their increase during the war—Discounts, tended in some respects, to retard the rise of prices—Discounts greatly facilitated by the exemption from cash payments—Effects, in a political sense, of that exemption—Depreciation; distinction between depreciation of bank paper, and a diminution in the value of money generally.

CHAPTER V.

SECTION I.—Historical Sketch of the Corn Trade from 1688, to 1819.—Causes of these fluctuations; the effect of our corn laws greatly overrated—Causes of fall since the peace.

SECTION II.—Situation and Prospects of our Agriculturists.—Effect on the price of corn of increasing population—Effect of a bad season—Prospect of prices; circumstances conducive to a rise—Circumstances which render a low price probable.

SECTION III.—A protecting Duty.—Comparative burdens on French and British agriculture—Are our manufactures benefited by protecting duties?—Danger of an over-extension of tillage—Objections to a high import duty—Tendency of our legislation to ultimate freedom of trade—A free import of corn arguments for and against it.

CHAPTER VI.

Poor-rate.—Amount of poor-rate in the different years from 1813 to 1822—Reduction since 1818—Workhouses—Management of the poor in Scotland and France—Comparative comfort of the labouring classes at different periods—Is our poor-law system beneficial to the lower orders?—Repeal of taxes on the necessaries of life.

CHAPTER VII.

Population.—Penury of early ages—Effect of increasing population—Average increase of population—Leading ideas of Mr. Malthus and Mr. S. Gray—Effect of easy communication—Effect of the Protestant Religion—Connexion between the increase of population and increase of national wealth—Comparison of public burdens in different parts of Europe—Wealth of town population—The comforts of the lower orders increase as society advances—Statistical table of Europe in 1823, viz. the comparative taxation and population of different countries.

CHAPTER VIII.

On the National Revenue and Capital.—Table of our present taxable income—Connexion between the increase of our numbers and that of our national income—France; her national income compared with that of England.

CHAPTER IX.

Effect of the War on property, individual and national.—The national debt—Effect of a state of war on the habits of individuals—Losses on the transition from war to peace—Our probable situation had peace been preserved—The late wars examined by moral considerations—Reduction of income since the peace—Effect on our public debt of the rise in the value of money—Have our public men, since 1793, understood our financial situation?—Mr. Pitt—The successors of Mr. Pitt—The opposition—Strictures on the education of our public men—Their conduct of the late wars—Their conduct of our internal affairs.

CHAPTER X.

SECTION I.—Fluctuations in the Value of money.—Effects of a state of war—Causes which affect the value of money—Supply of specie from the mines—Circulation of bank paper.

SECTION II.—Plan for lessening the injury from Fluctuation, and giving a uniform Value to Money Incomes.

CHAPTER XI.

SECTION I.—Our Finances.—The national debt—Fluctuations in the price of stock since 1720—Mr. Pitt's administration—The sinking fund; its limited operation—Compound interest a delusion—Advantages of a low rate of interest of money—Objections to a large sinking fund—Comparative taxation of England and France.

SECTION II.—Our prospects in Commerce and Finance.—Computed increase of our national income—Its surprising increase in the course of last century—Parallel of the resources of England and France.

SECTION III.—Views of Finance suggested by our Situation and prospects.—Relief that would arise from a reduction of taxes—Objections answered—M. Neckar ; his plan of finance—the question of a small annual loan in lieu of taxes ; State of the monied interest—Transmission of capital to foreign countries—Mr. Pitt ; his ability in finance.

MAYNARD & NOYES' INK POWDER, & INK.

The manufacturers have spared neither pains nor expense in their efforts to bring these articles to a state of perfection. Good Writing Ink is a thin, uniform fluid—has a lively bluish-black colour—flows freely from the pen, and penetrates a little into the paper. In a short time, its colour will pass to a rich, beautiful, and permanent black. It is formed by combining the oxide of iron with gallic acid and tannin, while diffused through an aqueous menstrum, thickened a little with mucilage. It is the result of the chemical action of such substances upon each other, as contain these principles ; and in making an Ink Powder, those are to be chosen which affords them in the greatest abundance.

Writing Ink is used for so many important purposes, in commercial transactions, as well as for records and manuscripts, that perfection in the art of making it is an object of the highest interest. As proofs of the success of their efforts, and of the unexampled reputation of their Ink Powder and Ink, the manufacturers offer the following testimonials.

From Rev. Joseph Emerson, Principal of the Female Seminary at Saugus, (Mass.)

After a long search for the best Ink Powder, I had the happiness to make trial of Maynard & Noyes'. Having now used it for several years, I am fully convinced of its superior excellence. I am confident those who use it according to the directions, will never be disappointed in the result.

Saugus, Oct. 4, 1823.

JOSEPH EMERSON.

From Mr. N. D. Gould, Author of Beauties of Writing, &c.

I have had occasion for several years past to use, and cause to be used, a considerable quantity of Ink ; and, for my own satisfaction, have tried the different kinds now in use ;—and I do not hesitate to state to the public, that I consider the Ink made from Maynard & Noyes' Ink Powder preferable to any other.

NATHANIEL D. GOULD.

Boston, Oct. 8, 1823.

Office, Bank U. S. Middletown, Oct. 17, 1823.

The Ink Powder of Messrs. Maynard & Noyes, has been used for some time past in this office, and I can cheerfully recommend it as superior to any I have heretofore used.

J. P. BURNHAM, Cashier.

United States' Armory, Springfield, Oct. 21, 1823.

I certify, that I have used, during the year past, Writing Ink made from the Powder manufactured by Messrs. Maynard & Noyes, of Boston, and that I have found it far superior for use, to "Walkden's British Ink Powder," or any other that I have ever made use of.

W. F. WOLCOTT.

From Mr. Gersham Cobb, Accountant, and Teacher of Penmanship.

Boston, Nov. 11, 1823.

Messrs. Maynard & Noyes: If of any use, with much pleasure I give the following, as my opinion of the superior quality of the Writing Ink made from the Powder manufactured by your House, and my reasons for that opinion.

Having been many years in the habit of doing fine and finished pieces of writing, where the best of Ink is absolutely necessary, I found it very difficult to please myself in this article. Many recipes for different preparations which I obtained, disappointed in their results. I then fixed on Walkden's as the best, by using double the quantity of the Powder prescribed. This did well to appearance, as it was perfectly black, but was too viscous for despatch, and in fine work would give the hair mark too large, or not clear.

In 1818 you mentioned having Ink of your own manufacture. I took some on trial, and have used it invariably since, (with the exception of two papers taken from the manufactory of Walkden in London the same year) and I now cheerfully say, I wish no better Ink than yours, and confidently believe that no better can be obtained, at present. Its fluidity admits of despatch—the quantity of colouring matter held in solution by the liquid, renders works of nicety and care perfectly black, which is considered one of the greatest beauties in the appearance of writing—and as a proof of its superior durability, I enclose you two scraps, written in 1818, and the only ones I can spare, written in that year. Respectfully, &c. GERSHAM COBB.

From John Fisk, Clerk of Superior Court, and Register of Deeds, Middlesex Co. Con.

I have used Messrs Maynard and Noyes' Ink Powder for eighteen months past, and have found it superior to any I have ever before used, and cheerfully recommend it for general use.

Middletown, Dec. 30, 1823.

JOHN FISK.

Springfield Bank. Oct. 21, 1823.

Messrs Maynard & Noyes: I have made use of your Ink altogether for the last three months, and much prefer it to any have ever used; and I cheerfully recommend it to the public the use of your powders.

Respectfully, your ob't servant, JOHN HOWARD, Cashier.

From Mr. Jackson, Teacher of Penmanship, in the Broad Street Academy, New-York.

Messrs. Maynard & Noyes: Having had one gross of your Ink Powder, which proving to be of superior quality, I do not hesitate to add my recommendation to the numerous ones you already have.

New-York, Dec. 4. 1823.

Gentlemen: We have used of your Ink for several years, and give it a decided preference.

Respectfully, BARRETT'S, TILESTON, & Co.
Maynard and Noyes, Boston.

New York, Dec. 3, 1823.

Messrs. Maynard and Noyes,

I have made trial of the sample of Ink Powder which you furnished me from your Manufactory of that article, and have no hesitation in saying that I deem it superior to any I have before used.

W. S. CARDELL, Instructor.

From Mr. Belcher, Master of the Public Writing School, in Derne Street, Boston.

Gentlemen,

In reply to your request for my opinion of the Ink Powder manufactured by you, I have only to observe, that from the experience afforded me of its merits, by using it for three years past, I am enabled to say, that it is in every respect superior to all other Ink Powder of which I have any knowledge.

I am your obedient, servant,

Maynard and Noyes.

J. H. BELCHER.

Patriotic Bank of Washington, 10 April, 1824.

Messrs. Maynard and Noyes,

Gentlemen,

For the last year I have been using your black Ink. I have been much pleased with it, and have no hesitation in recommending it to all who are desirous of giving permanency to their writing.

O. CARR, Cashier.

I give my testimony with pleasure in favor of Messrs. Maynard and Noyes' Ink.

ANDREW COYLE, Ch. Clk. Genl. Post Office,

I have no hesitation in pronouncing Messrs. Maynard and Noyes' Black Ink to be of as good quality as I would wish to use.

THOMAS B. DYER, Book-keeper G. P. Office.

Manufactured and sold wholesale and retail, by Maynard and Noyes, Chemists and Apothecaries, No. 48 Cornhill, Boston.

SHUFF'S HOTEL.

Steam-boat and Stage-house, near the Delaware River, the Steam-boat Landing, and the Trenton Bridge, Trenton, N. J. This spacious hotel, being in a delightful situation, as it respects healthiness and interesting prospects, may be considered an eligible summer residence.
